SINCERE GRIEF OF A GREAT PEOPLE.

TREMENDOUS CROWDS IN A DRIVING RAIN.

Living Wall Surrounds the City Hall Where Body Lies in State.

Steady Stream From the Immense Gathering Passes For Hours the Remains of the Martyred President.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BUFFALO (N. Y.) Sept. 15.—Exclusive Dispatch.] Three murdered Presidents have lain in state after death by assassins' bullets. Of these three, William McKinley is to have the simplest and the shortest funeral ceremonies. The burial will be as quick and as direct as possible. There will be no unnecessary prolonging of the heart-breaking strain that now prevails.

The pall of deepest grief that envelops the land will be lifted as much as it ever can be by a reasonably quick interment. After Buffalo, Washington and possibly Canton, will be the only cities where the remains will be formally exposed to view.

Buffalo today has had a four hours' glimpse of the sacred and sad remains, and at 5 o'clock this afternoon the casket's lid was closed, to be again opened Wednesday in Washington, where all who come may view what is left of the great and well-beloved Chief.

Today the immense gathering was patient, and determined to view the remains. Humanity blocked the down-town streets throughout the afternoon, till in some places the street cars were wedged in by a living wall that could not move, because beyond and still farther beyond was an extension of that wall that was only broken by the capacious, open doors of that massive municipal building, wherein was placed the remains occupying the center of the large hall, and giving convenient access to the vast number of people who passed in view.

TREMENDOUS CROWD.

The crowd was a tremendous one, which passed through the City Hall, and when 5 o'clock came, many thousands were still pressing for admission. It was such a crowd as may be seen only in great populous cities, and was largely composed of average citizens, the bone and sinew of the country. It seemed that every home in Buffalo had contributed its full quota to the grief-stricken thousands who insisted on this last view of their loved President.

It was an inspiring sight, and one that would impress the most ardent disbelievers in William McKinley's popularity, to see that great number stand unprotected, save by a few umbrellas, which were not adequate protection, in the driving rain that poured down steadily throughout most of the day. Women in light clothes that they never would have subjected to such a drenching for any other reason; men in their best apparel, and children in their Sunday clothes, fought for places in the line, and were not disturbed by the pelting elements. Every street surrounding the City Hall was black with people, and every person was soaked to the skin, yet all were cheerful, all were willing to pay the price for the privilege of a last farewell.

At 11 o'clock in the forenoon, simple funeral services had been held in the Milburn house, where the body of the late President then lay. The family, the Cabinet, and a few personal and political friends were the only ones admitted. President Roosevelt was present, and he went with the casket to the City Hall in the carriage immediately following the hearse. At 6:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, a funeral train, conveying the corpse, will leave for Washington. It will be as sad and solemn a funeral cortège as ever traversed the land. H. G. OTIS.

Mrs. McKinley, Benumbed by Grief, Fondles the Face of Her Dead—The Mute Chieftain's Body Lay With Head to Rising Sun.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUFFALO (N. Y.) Sept. 15.—Buffalo today became a city of mourning. The gay and flaming decorations of the Pan-American Exposition gave way to the symbol of sorrow. The black drapery of the city's streets muffled the tolling bells of the churches. Bits of crepe appeared on every sleeve. The sorrow was everywhere apparent. In the morning a simple service took place at the residence on Delaware avenue where the President died.

Only the immediate family and the friends and political associates of the President were present. The scene there was pathetic in the extreme. Then the body was borne through solid walls of living humanity, bareheaded and grief-stricken, to the City Hall, where it lay in state. There a remarkable demonstration occurred, which proved how close the President was to the hearts of the people. Arrangements had been made to allow the public to view the body from the time it arrived, at about 1:30 o'clock, until about 5 o'clock. But the people were wedged into the streets for blocks. When 5 o'clock came, 40,000 people had passed, and the crowd waiting in the streets seemed undiminished. It was decided to extend the time until midnight. Then for hours longer the streets were dense with people, and a constant stream flowed past the bier. When the doors were closed at midnight, it was estimated that 80,000 people had viewed the remains. Thousands of disappointed ones were still in the streets.

The body will lie in the City Hall until morning. It will be taken to the station by a military escort tomorrow morning, and at 8:30 o'clock the funeral train will start for Washington. Mrs. McKinley bore up bravely this morning during the service at the Milburn residence, and Dr. Rixey, her physician, thinks she will be able to support her trying part in the state funeral at Washington.

SERVICES AT RESIDENCE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MILBURN HOUSE, Sept. 15.—The day was gray and cheerless. Heavy clouds hung over the city, at times breaking, to let through a rift of sunshine, and shutting, to let loose a downpour upon the gathering multitude. The air was humid and heavy, and only a light wind from the south stirred the drooping flags and the emblems of mourning. The very elements seemed to lend fitting accompaniment to the scene of sorrow about to be enacted.

Long before the time set for the funeral services the vicinity of the Milburn house was astir with preparations. At 9 o'clock, long platoons of police officers, mounted and on foot, arrived at the grounds, and were posted in details along the street approaching the house. For a block in each direction, the streets were roped to keep back the gathering crowds. The vigilance of the officers in keeping back those not entitled to admission within the reserved area was doubled. Those summoned to the service, the uniformed escort of marchers, and those whose business imperatively brought them there, passed within the four-square precinct about the house where the body of the dead Chief reposed.

THE MILITARY.

Maj.-Gen. John R. Brooke, who was personally in command of all the forces participating in the escort, arrived at 10 o'clock. He was in fatigue uniform, with service sword at his side. Around his left arm was wound a heavy band of crepe. With him were his aides and a half score of other officers, all in fatigue uniform, with badges of mourning on their sleeves. The time was now approaching for the services. The tramp of the assembling military could be heard, and the walk leading up to the Milburn house began to be lined with those who were to be assembled about the bier. Even amid the stir of assembling, a solemn and awelike silence prevailed, and the division of the escort came to their posts with silent bands.

At 10:30 o'clock the military and naval detachments took temporary station on West Ferry street, immediately around the corner from the Milburn house. First came Co's. I and H of the Fourteenth U.S. Infantry, stationed at Fort Porter, under command of Capt. John R. M. Taylor, marching with the steady tread and bearing of regulars. Following them came a company of the Seventy-third Coast Artillery, now on duty at the Pan-American Exposition, in command of Capt. John P. Wiesser. These were the men who had been near the President at the moment when he was shot, and took part in the struggle with his assassin. The National Guard of the State of New York was represented by picked companies from the Seventy-fourth and Sixty-fifth regiments under command of Capt. Rowland.

THE NAVY.

Then the trappings of the military arm of the service gave way to those of the United States navy, as fifty men from the United States gunboat Michigan, under command of Col. L. T. Minnix, swung into position alongside their military brethren in arms. The naval contingent had arrived only this morning in order that all branches of the military, naval and marine service might be fittingly represented. At their head marched a detachment of marines, in their dark blue uniforms with large gilt-trimmed helmets. After them came the blue jackets with open-throated shirts, their loose black neck scarfs in sailor knots, with yellow leggings and sailor hats. Sailors and marines marched with their short carbines at shoulder arms. The entire military and naval force formed in company front on West Ferry street, and there awaited the time for the services to begin.

OFFICIALS AND FRIENDS.

Meantime the members of the Cabinet, officials high in the government service, and near friends of the martyred President, began to fill the walks leading up to the entrance to the Milburn residence. They came separately and in groups, some walking, Secretaries Wilson and Hitchcock drove up together, and Gov. Odell of New York followed with his secretary and Representative Littauer of New York. Following the Governor came Maj.-Gen. Roe, commander of the National Guard of New York, with his staff of aides, all in full uniform. Secretary Root walked to the house with Mr. and Mrs. Sprague, at whose house he has been a guest since first summoned to the city. Two and two, a long line of men of dignified bearing, marched up to see the house—the foreign representatives sent to the exposition, and after them the State commissioners. With the foreigners was a colonel of the Mexican army in his full uniform of black with scarlet stripes and peaked braided cap. The other members of the Cabinet, in the city, Secretary Long, Atty.-Gen. Knox, Postmaster-General Smith, the close confidantes and friends of the late Chief, Senator Hanna, Judge Day, Govs. Odell, Yates and Gregory; Representatives Alexander and Ryan, Maj.-Gen. Brooke, E. H. Butler, H. H. Kohlsaat and many others followed.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

It was just eight minutes before the opening of the service, when a covered barouche drove up to the house, bringing President Roosevelt and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, at whose house he is a guest. The President looked very grave as he alighted and turned to assist Mrs. Wilcox from the carriage. His face did not relax into a smile to the salutations nearest the carriage, but he acknowledged the greetings pleasantly and with an inclination of the head. Word passed up the well-filled walk that the President had arrived, and those waiting to gain entrance fell back, making a narrow lane through which Mr. Roosevelt passed along to the house.

As the President passed within the house, and the services were about to begin, the long line of soldiers and sailors swung in columns of fours into Delaware avenue and formed in battalion front along the beautiful thoroughfare opposite the house and immediately facing it. On the extreme left were the regulars; on the right, the sailors and marines, and in the center the National Guardsmen. They stood

CZOLGOSZ IGNORANT OF PRESIDENT'S FATE.

He Will Not Know That His Crime Is Murder Until Arraigned.

Grand Jury May Return an Indictment Today and the Case Go to Trial Inside of Fifteen Days—His Father Stunned.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—Czolgosz does not yet know that President McKinley is dead, and probably will not know it until he is arraigned. He will be indicted by the grand jury, probably tomorrow, and the case will then be immediately removed to the Supreme Court. The arraignment will then take place in that court, and will be very soon. No further effort was made by the officers today to talk with Czolgosz, nor was the theory of the poisoned bullet taken up by the police.

As to Emma Goldman, the situation stands unchanged, the police holding that there is not sufficient evidence on which to ask for her extradition.

NO SPECIAL SESSION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—Gov. Odell announced today that he had declined to call a special term of the Supreme Court to try the murder of President McKinley, because he believed that haste was not necessary. He said the District Attorney had assured him that the grand jury would indict, and the case be on trial within fifteen days, and to call a special term and get a jury assembled would take more than that. The assassin is in the Erie county penitentiary.

HIS FATHER HEARTBROKEN.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Sept. 15.—The father of the assassin of President McKinley has not slept nor taken anything to eat since last Saturday morning. Since the death of the President he has become moody and has lost his appetite.

A younger brother of the assassin says that his father is heartbroken as a consequence of the death of the President.

THE NEW PRESIDENT FACING THE FUTURE.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT READY FOR HIS GREAT TASK.

Wall Street Might Have Cause to Fear Him Were He Not Imbued With Lively Sense of Public Obligations and Without Resentment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While Buffalo and its tens of thousands of visitors have been reverently filing past the dead President's bier, the new President, with grave and resolute face, surrounded by councillors, has been looking into the future and making plans for the public good. There is no wavering about Theodore Roosevelt.

His declaration, which thrilled an all-too-panicky country, that he would carry on the policy of President McKinley is the only public utterance that he will make at this time. That utterance has won for Roosevelt golden praise from all parts of the country today. What tomorrow may bring forth in Wall street no one knows, but if confidence is not restored it will not be Theodore Roosevelt's fault. He means absolutely what he says. No man has a livelier sense of public obligation and the rights of vested capital, and no man in public life is more anxious that the course of business prosperity should continue.

President Roosevelt is not antagonistic to Wall street, although certain elements in Wall street have been bitterly antagonistic to and distrustful of him. He has never dreamed of making war on the great manipulators of the stock market or the creators of those vast aggregations of capital called trusts; yet some of these gentlemen thought it a fine thing to make him Vice-President in order to end his career. President Roosevelt will not carry into the Presidency any personal or political resentment.

The exploit of shelving Roosevelt has terminated in his elevation.

The statement that the new President made just before he took the oath was no hasty, impulsive remark. It had been carefully considered. The President really meant it as a tribute to President McKinley and as acknowledgment of the wisdom of the policy that the latter had started.

There are many speculations about Cabinet changes, but all that is sure is that Knox and Root will be urged to remain, with Root in the State Department. Gen. Leonard Wood is mentioned as the new head of the War Department. The careers of both Wood and Roosevelt since the outbreak of the Spanish war have been meteoric and full of romance.

TALKS WITH CABINET.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—When President Roosevelt dined, he asked that several persons be asked informally to dinner, and when the party sat down there were, in addition to the President and his host, Mr. Wilcox, Gov. Odell, Atty.-Gen. Knox, Secretary Root, Secretary of State Keene of New Jersey and William G. Warren, Republican State Committeeman of Buffalo. There was, as if by general consent, no discussion of political subjects.

During the afternoon there was a stream of callers, but the President saw but few of them. Senator Hawley of Connecticut was one who had a long talk with the President, and the latter invited him to go to Washington in his special car tomorrow.

In the evening, part of the Cabinet met at supper. About the board, in addition to the President, were Secretaries Long, Wilson and Hitchcock, Postmaster-General Smith and John G. Milburn. Here also political discussion was avoided entirely, but after supper Abe President had a long discussion with the Cabinet officers on the political situation of governmental affairs.

President Roosevelt declined to talk today or tonight on public topics, except to say that the suggestion made in some newspapers regarding his Cabinet were premature, particularly in view of the fact that he had asked that the present Cabinet stay with him.

The President retired early tonight, in preparation for the long journey tomorrow.

SERVICES AT PHOENIX.

MINISTER SAMPSON A SPEAKER.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 15.—All Phoenix clergymen united to conduct memorial services at First Methodist Episcopal Church tonight. Gen. A. J. Sampson, United States Minister to Ecuador, was also one of the speakers.

ROOSEVELT FAMILY.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, accompanied by her five children, nurse and maid, reached this city from Albany early this morning, having left the Tahawus Club Saturday morning, and left Long Island City soon afterward for the Roosevelt home near Oyster Bay.

PRESIDENT'S LAST WILL.

Leaves the Bulk of His Moderate Fortune to Mrs. McKinley.

[NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—President McKinley has left a will. The instrument was executed some time before the shooting, and at no time during his final suffering was there any wish or occasion to revise it or to frame a codicil. It leaves the bulk of his property to Mrs. McKinley.

How much the estate is worth cannot be stated with exactness by those most familiar with the late President's business affairs, but it is believed to be a goodly sum, although not amounting to a large fortune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—That President McKinley expected to live for many years is evidenced from the insurance he carried on his life, in favor of his wife. Only a few weeks ago, it can be said on good authority, he changed a straight life insurance policy of $50,000 for a twenty-year endowment policy. He carried this in one of the big New York companies.

It was announced by another insurance company that its agents had paid by check, Saturday, to Mrs. McKinley a policy calling for $10,000. Reports that the President carried insurance amounting to $200,000 or more are not credited by leading insurance men in this city. Several experts yesterday placed the total amount at not more than $70,000.

REMARKABLE OUTBURST.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—It would almost be impossible to record in detail the remarkable outburst of sympathy in Great Britain and her colonies on the death of President McKinley, proofs of which are continually arriving here. Not only has King Edward commanded the court to go into mourning for one week, but wherever a public meeting of any kind has been held or wherever a public man has had occasion to speak, expressions of horror and sympathy have been heard.

In every place of public worship yesterday, from St. Paul's Cathedral and Canterbury Cathedral down, the preachers made special reference to President McKinley. Puperal marches were played in every church in the kingdom.

JAMAICA MOURNS.

KINGSTON (Jamaica) Sept. 15.—Today sermons touching upon the death of President McKinley were preached in all the principal churches. The newspapers, which appeared with black borders, contained elaborate tributes to the dead President.

ANARCHIST CLUBS TO BE CLOSED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—[By Atlantic Cable.] The service of mourning for the death of President McKinley, held in the American church in Berlin, was very impressive. The edifice was heavily hung with crepe and crowded with Germans, British and Americans. Among those who attended were Baron Von Richthofen, German Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mr. White, the United States Ambassador.

The Cologne Gazette asserts that all anarchist meetings have been forbidden in Germany since yesterday, and that all anarchist clubs will be closed.

RUSSIA'S CAPITAL STIRRED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 15.—[By Atlantic Cable.] The all-absorbing topic in St. Petersburg today was the death of President McKinley. The Novoe Vremya says: "He was a man of large talents, and a beloved son of the country for whose welfare he incessingly and successfully labored."

American officials in St. Petersburg today attended services at the Anglican Church, where a dead march was rendered and suitable hymns were sung. Special services were also held in the English church in Moscow.

AMERICAN CHURCHES CROWDED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PARIS, Sept. 15.—[By Atlantic Cable.] The American churches in Paris were crowded today with American residents and visitors. In every case the preachers made sympathetic references in their sermons to President McKinley, and offered special prayers. The porches and interior of the edifices were hung with crepe.

Gen. Porter is still confined to his room, but is making rapid progress toward recovery.

Allusions to President McKinley were also made in the British churches in Paris and in French churches where English is spoken.

The latest information indicates that the French government will not abandon the gala performance arranged to be given for the Czar at Compeigne, on the ground that, being given in the interior of the palace, it will have a private character.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT BY SECRETARY HAY.

REMAINS WILL BE TAKEN TO WASHINGTON TODAY.

Religious Services to Be Held in the Rotunda of the Capitol Wednesday Noon—Body Will Then Be Transferred to the Old Home at Canton.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Secretary Hay today issued to the public the following announcement concerning the funeral of President McKinley:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington (D. C.) Sept. 15, 1901.

The remains of the late President of the United States, after lying in state in the City Hall of Buffalo during the afternoon of Sunday, September 15, will be removed to Washington on Monday, September 16, leaving Buffalo at 6:30 a.m., and reaching Washington at 9 p.m. The remains will then be carried, under the escort of a squadron of United States cavalry, to the Executive Mansion, where they will rest until 9 o'clock in the morning of Tuesday, September 17. They will then be carried to the Capitol, accompanied by a military escort, the details of which will be given in a separate notice. The remains will there lie in state.

Religious services will be held in the rotunda of the Capitol on Wednesday, at 12 o'clock noon. At 1 o'clock the remains, under a military escort, will be transferred to a funeral car and carried to Canton, O., via the Pennsylvania Railroad, arriving there on Thursday at 11 a.m., when arrangements for the final sepulture will be committed to the charge of the citizens of Canton, under direction of a committee to be selected by the Mayor of that city.

No ceremonies are expected in the cities and towns along the route of the funeral train beyond the tolling of bells.

[Signed] JOHN HAY,
Secretary of State.

The heads of the various departments and their principal assistants were busy today making arrangements for the proper execution of so much of the funeral programme as fell to them respectively. Secretary Hay came to his desk early in the morning and remained throughout the day. Though it was Sunday, cablegrams of condolence were still coming to the Department of State from all parts of the world.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

In the War Department Acting Secretary Sanger was in consultation with Gen. Gillespie, Col. Ward and Gen. Barry arranging for transportation to Washington of the troops to participate in the funeral procession, making details for guard duty and other matters. Gen. Randolph, chief of artillery, who is to represent the army at the Capitol arranged with Sergeant-at-Arms Ransdell that they should cooperate in the management of the funeral ceremonies at the Capitol. Four private soldiers will stand watch each night, one at each corner of the catafalque, so long as the remains of the late President shall lie in the Capitol building. A suitable guard will be maintained at the entrances and will keep the people in alignment when they are admitted to the Capitol to view the remains next Tuesday.

Acting Secretary Hackett ordered but a detail should be made, consisting of two officers, four petty officers and twenty-one privates in the Marine Corps, for duty at the Capitol next Tuesday, to supplement the army representation.

The special guard of honor to represent the navy at the funeral ceremonies will comprise the following officers of high rank: Admiral Dewey, Rear-Admiral Crowninshield, Rear-Admiral O'Neal, Paymaster-General Remey, Brig.-Gen. Heywood of the Marine Corps.

While Gen. Brooke will be in general charge of military arrangements here, Gen. Francis I. Greenther will be in command of the military contingent in the procession. Col. Samuel Reber, son-in-law of Gen. Miles, has been detailed to meet Mrs. McKinley and look especially after her comfort, while Col. Henry H. Whitney, of Gen. Miles's staff, has been ordered to perform a similar task for President Roosevelt.

AT THE CAPITOL.

At the Capitol Sergeant-at-Arms Ransdell directed the preparation of the rotunda for the funeral services. The space in even this vast structure is entirely insufficient to meet the demand for admission of more than a fraction of the persons who think they should be admitted to the services next Wednesday. The public will be excluded, as the accommodations will not suffice for the officials who must be present. The diplomatic corps alone will occupy about two hundred places, and in addition there will be the United States Senate, the United States Supreme Court, the House of Representatives, and a large number of officials, army and navy, and civilians. Every army and navy officer in Washington having been ordered to attend the funeral services, they alone will consume a large portion of the seating space. The general public will have an opportunity to view the remains of the late President while the body lies in state before the funeral services.

THE STATE CATAFALQUE.

The sergeant-at-arms has had the catafalque which supported the remains of Lincoln, Garfield and other statesmen brought out, and has turned it over to the funeral directors. The catafalque is to be draped entirely with new black cloth. Sergeant-at-Arms Ransdell has taken steps to secure the attendance at the funeral next Wednesday of as many Senators as can be reached, and has arranged for a special car to bring from Chicago to Washington such Senators from western points as can gather there in time. This car will be attached to the regular Pennsylvania train leaving Chicago at 3 o'clock p.m., Monday, the 16th inst. It will be in charge of R. W. Layton, assistant sergeant-at-arms of the Senate. Telegrams have been sent to every Senator within reach of wire communication, and the Sergeant-at-Arms has received a number of responses from individual Senators promising to be present. Senator Frye, the president pro tem. of the Senate, telegraphed that he would leave Lewiston, Me., this morning, and would be here tomorrow night. It is understood that he will appoint all of the Senators who come to Washington a committee of honor to participate in the funeral services.

FROM GEN. CHAFFEE.

A cablegram was received at the War Department today from Gen. Chaffee, as follows:

MANILA, Sept. 15.—The officers and the soldiers of the Division of the Philippines beg the department to place an appropriate floral design on the bier of the President of the United States as a token of a great sorrow. They offer their deepest sympathy to Mrs. McKinley.

[Signed] CHAFFEE.

In answer to this appeal, the War Department arranged with a local florist to supply a handsome floral shield with the Eighth Army Corps badge in the center.

Gen. Barry, assistant Adjutant-General, who has been placed in charge of the affairs at the White House during the time the remains are in Washington, has completed his programme. He has directed the commanding officer at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, to dispatch twelve non-commissioned officers to Washington in charge of a commissioned officer to act as body bearers. They are to arrive in Washington in time to handle the remains when they reach the railroad station tomorrow night. They are to remove the casket from the train and place it in a hearse, and will walk, six on a side of the hearse, to the White House. It will also be their duty to place the casket upon the stand in the East Room and to perform like offices at the Capitol, the railway station and at Canton.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Gen. Barry has arranged to have six ebony columns placed in the White House to support the casket. The active guard at the Executive Mansion will consist of two officers, three non-commissioned officers and nine privates of artillery from Fort Hunt, supplemented by an equal number of officers from the navy, and by six members of the Loyal Legion, and six of the Grand Army of the Republic. From the time the remains reach the White House, the guard will be maintained until the body is removed to the Capitol Tuesday morning. A soldier and a sailor, or a marine, will stand at the head of the coffin, and two more at the foot, while on their side will stand a member of the G.A.R., and a member of the Loyal Legion. Provision will be made for relieving these watchers at proper intervals.

To provide for the proper arrangement in the line of procession of the diplomatic body, and of Senators, Representatives, and of persons who may gather at the White House to join in the procession to the Capitol, Gen. Barry has selected a special staff, headed by Lieut.-Col. M. A. Miller of the engineers, Capts. C. B. Wheeler and W. W. Gibson of the ordnance, and Maj. S. V. Abbott and Capt. M. M. Mattrick of the engineers.

CHANGE OF PLANS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The following official statement, making important changes in the plans for the funeral service over the remains of President McKinley in this city, was given to the press tonight:

In compliance with the earnest wishes of Mrs. McKinley that the body of her husband shall rest in her home at Canton, Wednesday night, the following changes in the obsequies of the late President will be made:

Funeral services in the rotunda of the Capitol will be held Tuesday morning, on the arrival of the escort which will accompany the remains from the White House. The body of the late President will lie in state in the rotunda for the remainder of Tuesday, and will be escorted to the railroad station Tuesday evening. The funeral train will leave Washington at or about 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, and thus will arrive at Canton, O., during the day Wednesday.

GUARDS OF HONOR.

NAVY, MARINES AND G.A.R.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Acting Secretary Hackett today issued an order to all officers of the active list of the navy and marine corps on duty in Washington to meet the remains of the late President on its arrival from Buffalo Monday, and to march as guards of honor to the Executive Mansion, and Tuesday, between the White House and the Capitol and Wednesday between the Capitol and the Pennsylvania Railroad station.

The following special guard of honor which will escort the remains over the same route and finally to Canton was appointed: Rear-Admiral A. S. Crowninshield, Rear-Admiral Charles O'Neal, Brig.-Gen. Charles Heywood, U.S.M.C. All officers of the flag rank will constitute an additional special guard of honor in Washington, but will not accompany the remains to Canton.

The following members of the District of Columbia Loyal Legion have been designated to act as special guard of honor at night, while President McKinley's body lies in state in Washington: Admiral John C. Walker, Col. Cecil Gray, Capt. G. C. Cole, Maj. G. C. Larrabee, Col. Archibald Hopkins, Capt. F. W. Mitchell, Gen. George B. Williams, Col. G. A. Woodruff, Col. Carroll D. Wright, Capt. R. W. Tyler. They will serve at the White House Monday and Tuesday night.

Thus far the only naval orders issued for participation in the parade have been to the Marine Band, a detachment of marines from the Washington barracks, and fifty seamen from the Illinois, now at New Orleans, but the balance of the naval contingent will be ordered tomorrow by Acting Secretary Hackett from Rear-Admiral Higginson's squadron at Hampton Roads. The hearse used in the parade will be drawn by six black steeds, draped with black netting, and a groom in black, wearing a high hat, will ride beside each horse. The casket will not be opened at all while in the White House. In the Capitol, the statues in Statuary Hall will be draped with the American flag. There will be no other draping in the building, with the possible exception of the walls of the rotunda.

The United Veterans' Legion, in addition to the G.A.R and Loyal Legion, of all three of which the late President was a member, also will occupy a post of honor in front of the hearse in the parade.

BIG RACES POSTPONED.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—The directors of the New England Trotting Horse Breeders' Association today ordered that the $20,000 Cresceus-The Abbot and the $5000 Borsima-Lord Derby races scheduled for that date be postponed until Friday, out of respect to President McKinley.

M'BURNEY IS BLAMED.

Doctors Say He Was Too Optimistic.

Their Opinions Differ on Other Points.

One Physician Says Unduly Hopeful Reports Saved Financial Panic.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The World's Buffalo special says:

The disagreement among the doctors, foreshadowed in the World this morning, broke out today. It promises to be a bitter, and perhaps even scandalous, public controversy. As the interviews show, Drs. Mann, Park, Mynter and Wasdin disagree among themselves as to surgical and medical points in the case. They agree at only one point. They all say that Dr. McBurney of New York was directly responsible for the public impression that President McKinley was certain to get well. They all say that from the first moment of his appearance in the case he was the most optimistic; that, contrary to his invariable custom in the past, he saw and talked freely with newspaper men, and gave them first optimistic and then positive assurances that the President would get well.

They say that it was at his suggestion that President McKinley was given solid food Thursday, and that he alone gave out the positive statement (it was Thursday, just before he left,) that President McKinley would certainly get well. Dr. Mann says that this positive statement was to his mind such a misstatement that he was on the point of giving out over his own signature a statement more moderate in tone and more in accord with the facts of the case as he saw it. They all say that the official bulletins which were hopeful, but not positive in tone, fairly expressed their opinion. They say that they let Dr. McBurney have his way because they deferred to his established fame as one of the very greatest, if not the greatest, of surgeons of America. Their own disagreements among themselves may be summed up as follows:

As to the track of the wound made by the second bullet, Dr. Park says that it penetrated the pancreas. The others say it did not.

As to the cause of gangrene, Dr. Wasdin says it looks to him like poison from a poisoned bullet. The others think not.

Dr. Park says he thinks the pancreatic fluid is responsible for the gangrene. The others deny that the pancreatic fluid escaped from the pancreas.

As to the extent of the gangrene, Dr. Mann said he found gangrene in the surface of the wound made by the second bullet when he opened it Tuesday, and that he cut away the mortified flesh there before sewing it up again. Dr. Park says there was no gangrene found there at that time.

As to the cause in general, some say that it is a rare case; others that it had few extraordinary features.

Furthermore, it has now come out that, underneath the skin where the first bullet struck and made a slight abrasion, they found at the autopsy a large patch of gangrened flesh, several inches in diameter.

Since the amazing discoveries at the autopsy—discoveries which make it certain that there was not from the very beginning the slightest chance that President McKinley would recover—several facts have been noted in the official bulletins and are being wonderingly commented upon.

There are no cases on record of a man over 45 years of age getting well of a shot through the stomach. After 45 the flesh is too old. It does not heal properly. It easily falls a prey to gangrene.

The disagreements among the doctors are all subordinate to the phase of the controversy which tends to shift the blame of over-optimism, and utter absence of caution in communicating the news to the public upon Dr. McBurney. The doctors are very positive and very bitter in asserting that his optimism not only misled them, because of their profound respect for his skill and knowledge, but also gave the public an impression of optimism far stronger than any of the doctors, except McBurney, felt or expressed.

One of the doctors, who refused to let his name be given at this stage of the controversy, said tonight: "At the time I was disturbed by Dr. McBurney's positive optimism. Now, as I look back upon it, I am at a loss to understand it."

Another doctor said: "Only my own desire that the best might be true, coupled with a natural dread of an appearance of wrangling among the physicians, restrained me from publicly contradicting Dr. McBurney's statement of Thursday morning that President McKinley would get well. If the question at issue had been one of treatment involving the patient's health, of course, hesitation would have been impossible."

TO PREVENT A PANIC.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The World's Buffalo special says that a physician of high standing who has been intimately associated with all developments at the Milburn house since the late President was shot, made the somewhat startling statement tonight that he knew it to be a fact that one of the leading physicians in the corps attendant upon President McKinley had deliberately caused unduly hopeful statements to be made to the public before the collapse which preceded death.

The World's informant, whose name, for obvious reasons cannot be disclosed, said: "I have reason to believe it was a great New York financier, whose interests are probably more widespread and important than those of any other man in the financial world, who recommended the doctor I refer to. He, more than anyone else, was responsible for the misleading statements regarding the President's condition. His course in making the optimistic announcements, supplementing the very hopeful bulletins issued, was to give time to steady the markets. I think it was a good idea. I believe, and he certainly believed, that there was no harm in the deception, if deception there was, on the basis that much good was done to the public in general in thus helping to avoid a panic."

MYSTERY CLEARED UP.

M. G. Vanderburg's Body Found in Water at Chicago — Stella Cook Drowned With Him While Out Rowing.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—With the finding in the water at the foot of Peck Court today of the body of M. G. Vanderburg, a wealthy resident of the Netherlands, an associate of American capitalists and a guest at the Auditorium Annex, the mysterious death of Stella Cook, last Tuesday night, was cleared. Miss Cook was not murdered, according to present [illegible] of the police, but lost her life with Vanderburg by the overturning of a boat in which they were rowing.

The discovery of the Hollander's body not only cleared up the murder mystery, but dispelled the cloud of suspicion that has settled about Harry Thurston, cook on the steamer City of Traverse, companion of the dead girl.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

FOREST FIRES RAGING.

Much Valuable Timber Burned West of Eldora, Colo.—Sanders Family Takes Refuge in Tunnel and is Cut Out.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ELDORA (Colo.) Sept. 16.—A forest fire which started west of here about noon yesterday has already burned over a large territory and destroyed much valuable timber. The families of all the miners employed at Owgley & Co.'s camp were sent to the place, and the men set to fighting the flames to prevent their spreading to the company's mills.

A man by the name of Sanders, who operates a tunnel on Woodland Mountain, took his wife and child and sought refuge in the tunnel. At last accounts the tunnel was completely surrounded by flames, and the occupants entirely cut off.

CRESCEUS'S LAST RACE.

BALTIMORE (Md.) Sept. 15.—The board of directors of the Pimlico race track received a telegram today from George H. Ketcham, stating that Cresceus would race no more after he had tried to lower his mark at the Pimlico track in October. Mr. Ketcham asserted positively that whether the great trotter succeeded in his attempt or not, he would be retired from the track. October 3 has been selected as the day upon which Cresceus will try to lower the record.

GREAT CITIES IN MOURNING.

Draping of New York Went on All Day.

Churches Throughout Land Had Services.

Remarkable Outburst of Sympathy in Great Britain. On the Continent.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The draping of public buildings in the city, banks and business houses in the financial district, business houses on Broadway, hotels and theaters has been going on all day. By morning, commercial and financial New York will present an appearance commensurate with the event which is the sorrow of the nation.

Naturally the theme of all the sermons preached in New York and its suburbs today was the death of the President. With practical unanimity, those in charge of the services had the congregations sing "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Most of the churches were draped in black, and in not a few the American flag mingled its colors with the folds of crepe. The congregations were large in every church.

THEATERS TO CLOSE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—On the announcement of President McKinley's death, James K. Hackett, who is playing a very successful engagement at Wallack's Theater, closed the house, refusing to appear, although the pressure of rival performances was very strong and his house was practically sold out. Weber & Fields followed his example. Tonight Mr. Hackett made the announcement that he would not resume until after the funeral services at Canton.

At a meeting of the theatrical managers tonight it was decided to close all the houses on the day of the funeral at Canton.

DETROIT MASS MEETING.

CRIES AGAINST ANARCHISTS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

DETROIT, Sept. 15.—Nearly two thousand people gathered this afternoon at a public mass meeting in the Armory. Gen. R. A. Alger said: "The root of anarchy which has started in our country and which has resulted in the loss of a President should be stamped out. It is our imperative duty to stamp out this evil."

Gen. H. M. Duffield declared: "Congress dare not adjourn without passing a measure which will stamp out this greatest of evils—anarchism."

When Frederick Russell, a leader of the local bar, asked: "What shall be done with anarchists?" there were cries from the audience of "Kill them!" "Burn them!" etc.

AT THE CAPITAL.

HIS PEW WAS DRAPED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—"Near, My God, to Thee," the late President's chosen hymn, formed a feature of the services in almost every church in the national capital today.

The Metropolitan Methodist Church, the President's church, was crowded. The President's pew was heavily draped in black.

THE OLD HOME.

SORROWING CONGREGATIONS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CANTON (O.) Sept. 15.—Judge William R. Day arrived home from Buffalo today, and made partial arrangements for the funeral of President McKinley. Maj. Robertson appointed an executive committee, headed by Judge Day, and the committee was in session until late tonight.

Adjt.-Gen. Gyger tendered the services of the Ohio National Guard, and numerous societies and lodges made tenders of their services. For fear Canton will become congested, the tenders were held in abeyance for further action.

The committee tonight received a telegram from the Colorado troop of Denver, asking that they be permitted to take part in the funeral. The committee concluded that, owing to the large number of Ohio troops, it will be impossible to accommodate those from other States.

In consequence of the fact that the people of Canton have been urging that more time be given in which to view the remains, the committee sent a telegram to Secretary Root, asking that the train arrive here earlier. To this telegram no answer has as yet been received.

Canton churches were filled Sunday with sorrowing congregations who assembled to hear eloquent eulogies of President McKinley.

IN FAR MANILA.

PROCLAMATION BY TAFT.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MANILA, Sept. 15.—[By Manila Cable.] The profoundest grief is manifested by every class in the community over the death of President McKinley.

Gov. Taft has issued a proclamation which explains to the Filipinos that while the death of President McKinley is an irreparable individual loss, it does not alter the stability of the government or change the administration. This was necessary, because like Bryan would succeed him.

LARGE CROWDS.

at "parade rest," with colors lowered, each flag wound about its staff and bound with crepe. The front of the house and the lawns had been cleared by this time, and the sweep of the avenue was now deserted save for the rigid, motionless guards across from the house.

THE HEARSE.

The service had already begun, when down the avenue four high-stepping black horses came into view drawing the hearse which was to bear the casket of the dead President. It was a heavy vehicle without plumes or any trappings to relieve the dead black. The horses, too, were not plumed or caparisoned and all four of them were black from nose to tip of tail. Two men were on the box, the driver, with long lines to the tandem pairs, and the groom with folded arms sitting motionless. Outside the house there was a half hour of silence and waiting. Within the house of death was woe unspeakable.

THE DEAD.

In the drawing-room to the right of the hall, as President Roosevelt entered, the dead Chieftain was stretched upon his bier. His head was to the rising sun. On his face was written the glory of the Christian forbearance with which he had met his martyrdom. Only the thinness of his face bore mute testimony to the patient sufferings he had endured. He was dressed as he always was in life. The black frock coat was buttoned across the breast where the first bullet of the assassin had struck. The black string tie, below the standing collar, showed the little triangle of white shirt front. The right hand lay at his side. The left was across his breast. He looked as millions of his countrymen have seen him, save for one thing. The little badge of the Loyal Legion, the only decoration he ever wore, which was always in the left lapel of his coat, was missing. And some who remarked this spoke of it. And after the body was taken to the City Hall, the little badge which he prized through life was placed again where it had always been.

The body lay in a black casket on a black bearskin rug. Over the lower casket was flung the starry banner he had loved so well. The flowers were few, as befitted the simple nature of the man. A spray of white chrysanthemums, a flaming bunch of blood-red American Beauty roses and a magnificent bunch of violets were on the casket. That was all. Behind the head, against a pier mirror between the two curtained windows, rested two superb wreaths of white asters and roses. These were the only flowers in the room. Two sentries, one from the sea and one from the land, guarded the remains. They stood in the window embrasures behind the head of the casket. The one to the north was a sergeant of infantry. In the other window was a sailor, garbed in the loose blue blouse of the navy.

THE FAMILY.

The family had taken leave of their dead one before the others arrived. Mrs. McKinley, the poor, grief-crushed widow, had been led into the chamber of her physician, Dr. Rixey, and had a while alone with him who had supported and comforted her through their years of wedded life. But with her support was gone, she had broken down. Dry-eyed, she gazed on him and fondled his face. She did not seem to realize that he was dead. When she was led away by Dr. Rixey to look up her position at the head of the stairs, where she could hear the coming. Mrs. Hobart, the widow of the Vice-President during President McKinley's first term, Mrs. Lafayette Hanna of Chicago, Miss Barber, sister of Mrs. Barber and Dr. Rixey remained with her. The other members of the family, Mr. and Mrs. Abner McKinley, Miss Helen McKinley, Mrs. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] and Dr. and Mrs. Baer, had withdrawn to the library to the north of the drawing-room in which the casket stood, and here also gathered other members when the service was held.

TAKING A LAST LOOK.

The friends and public associates of the dead President all had opportunity to view the remains before the services began. The members of the Cabinet had taken their leave before the family arrived. They remained seated around their dead Chief, while the sad procession viewed the body. They were in the room on the north side of it. A place directly at the head had been reserved for President Roosevelt. Secretary Hay sat alongside this empty chair. Then came Atty.-Gen. Knox, Secretary Hitchcock, Secretary Wilson and Postmaster-General Smith in the order named.

Over a hundred in all saw the body. Many were so overcome with grief at the sight of the thin, placid countenance that their frames shook with convulsive sobs. Several clung to the side of the casket, and many with difficulty could be persuaded to leave. Almost every face was tear-stained. The great love for the dead chief choked all in the house.

Among those in the procession were Senator Fairbanks and Burrows, Gov. Yates of Illinois, Comptroller Dawes, Representative Henderson and Mrs. Manderson, Representative Littauer of New York, Postmaster-General William L. Wilson, and the consulting physicians, one of whom had met President McKinley personally for the first time when he was stricken, and had learned to admire him while he suffered so gently and patiently on his bed of pain. Senator Hanna, who had fairly worshiped his dead friend for years, entered the room at this time, but did not approach the casket. His face was the face of an iron-willed man who would not let down the barrier of his grief. The Senator spoke to no one. His eyes were vacant. He passed through the throng and seated himself beside Gov. Odell, sinking far back into his chair, and resting his head upon his hand. During all the time that followed, he did not stir.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

arrived before 11 o'clock. President Roosevelt entered, coming into the room from the rear through the library after passing into the hall, he made his way around through the throng and took his position behind into the library. There was an instantaneous movement of those in the room as the President approached. The procession was still passing from the south side around the head of the casket, and between it and the members of the Cabinet seated on its side. Every one rose, and all eyes were turned toward the President. He moved forward again with bowed head to the side of the procession to his place at the head of the line of Cabinet officers. There he held himself erect, his left hand carrying his silk hat. Those who were coming toward him fell back on either side to let him pass. He paused once or twice to shake hands silently, but there was no smile to accompany the greetings. He, too, like the man who had risen in his seat against the wall, seemed to have forgotten to rise when the President of the United States entered, and seemed to be restraining a great grief. When President Roosevelt reached the head of the line of Cabinet officers he kept his face away from the casket. An infantryman guarding the dead stood before him rigid as a statue. Although the Commander-in-Chief approached until he could have touched him, the soldier did not salute. The President spoke to Secretary Root, or perhaps it would be more precise to say that the latter spoke to him. The President seemed to be steeling himself for a look into the face of him whose death had made him the first ruler of the world. The tension in the room was great. Everyone seemed to be waiting. The minister of the gospel stood with the Holy Book in his hand, ready to begin. Perhaps it might have been sixty seconds, it seemed longer. Then the President turned, and at the same time advanced one step. He bowed his head and looked down upon the man whose burden and responsibilities he had taken upon himself. Long he gazed, standing immovable, save for a twitching of the muscles of the chin as he labored with heavy breath to repress his emotion. At last he stepped back. Col. Bingham, the aide to the President, standing ten feet below the foot of the casket at the side of the loyal Cortelyou, glanced in the direction of the Rev. Charles Edward Locke of the Delaware Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, who was to conduct the service.

THE SERVICES.

The pastor was at the door leading into the hall, a station whence his words could be heard at the head of the stairs. The signal was given, and there walled out from the hall the beautiful words of "Lead, Kindly Light," sung by a quartette. It was President McKinley's favorite hymn. Everyone within sound of the music knew it, and half of those in the room put their faces into their hands to hide their tears. Comptroller Dawes leaned against a bookcase and wept. President Roosevelt seemed to be swaying to and fro, as if his footing were insecure.

When the singing ended, the clergyman read from the Word of the First Corinthians, xv. All had risen as he began and remained standing throughout the remainder of the service. Again the voices rose with the words of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," the very words President McKinley had repeated at intervals of consciousness during the day of agony before he died. As the music died away, the pastor spoke again.

"Let us pray," he said, and every head fell upon its breast. He began his invocation with a stanza from a hymn sung in the Methodist Church. His prayer was as follows:

"O God, our Help in ages past,

"Our Hope for years to come;

"Our Shelter from the storm's blast,

"And our Eternal Home.

"We, Thy servants, humbly beseech Thee for manifestations of Thy favor as we come into Thy presence. We laud and magnify Thy Holy Name and praise Thee for all Thy goodness. Be merciful unto us and bless us as stricken with overwhelming sorrow, we come to Thee. Forgive us for our doubts and fears and faltering faith; pardon all our sins and shortcomings, and help us to say, 'Thy will be done.'

"In this dark night of grief, abide with us till the dawning. Speak to our troubled souls, O God, and give to us in this hour of unutterable grief the peace and quiet which Thy presence only can afford. We thank Thee that Thou answerest the sobbing sigh of the heart, and dost assure us that if a man die he shall live again. We praise Thee for Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Savior and Elder Brother, that He came 'to bring life and immortality to light,' and because He lives we shall live also. We thank Thee that 'death is victory'; that to die is gain. Have mercy upon us in this dispensation of Thy providence. We believe in Thee—we trust Thee—our God of life, 'the same yesterday, today and forever.' We thank Thee for the unsullied life of Thy servant, our martyred President, whom Thou hast taken to Thy coronation, and we pray for the final triumph of all the divine principles of pure character and free government for which he stood while he lived, and which were baptized by his blood in his death.

"Hear our prayer for Blessings of consolation upon all those who were associated with him in the administration of affairs of the government. Especially vouchsafe Thy presence to Thy servant, who has been suddenly called to assume the holy responsibility of our Chief Magistrate.

"O God, bless our dear nation, and guide the ship of state through stormy seas. Help Thy people to be brave to fight the battles of the Lord and wise to solve all the problems of freedom.

"Graciously hear us for comforting blessings to rest on the family circle of our departed friend. Tenderly sustain Thine handmaiden upon whom the blow of this sorrow most heavily falls. Accompany her, O God, as Thou hast promised, through this dark valley and shadow, and may she fear no evil, because Thou art with her.

"All these things we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, who has taught us when we pray, to say, 'Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, for Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.'

"May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, the Father and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with us all, evermore. Amen."

All present joined in the Lord's Prayer as the minister repeated it. President Roosevelt's voice being audible at the back of the room. The service concluded with a simple benediction. The funeral director was about to step forward to place the cover on the casket, when suddenly there was a movement behind Gov. Odell. Senator Hanna, who had risen, saw that the last opportunity to look into the face of his dead friend had come. Pressing forward in an instant he was at the side of the casket, and bending over and looking down into it. Almost two minutes passed, and then he turned away, and the coffin was closed.

FUNERAL CORTEGE.

Col. Bingham signaled the bodybearers. Four sailors, two infantry sergeants and two artillery sergeants bore the casket aloft and out of the house. The President, Cabinet and the others followed it. Mrs. McKinley and the members of the family remained. The widow had passed through the ordeal bravely, and without breaking down. The trained nurses and the personal attendants of the President gathered on the side porch to see the body taken away.

It was within a minute of 11:30 o'clock when three long rolls of a muffled drum told those outside the house that the funeral cortége was about to appear. From the darkened rooms the assemblage began to file out to the street. Soon the walks and lawns were again covered with the silent throng, with heads bared. At the moment the casket appeared, "Nearer, My God, to Thee" ascended in subdued strains from one of the military bands. Tenderly the bearers lowered the casket from their shoulders, and placed it in the hearse.

The notes of Chopin's "Funeral Dirge" succeeded the strains of the hymn. The sailors and soldiers swung into long columns, and took up the march southward toward the City Hall.

President Roosevelt came from the house almost immediately, following the casket, and arm-in-arm with Secretary Root moved through the aisle of people. He entered the first carriage with Mr. Root and with Atty.-Gen. Knox and with Postmaster-General Smith, who had followed.

The Presidential carriage fell in immediately back of the military escort. Following in the second carriage were Secretary Long, Secretary Hitchcock, Secretary Wilson and Secretary Cortelyou. Maj.-Gen. Brooke was in the third carriage and Rev. Dr. Locke and his wife in the fourth.

In this order, four carriages preceded the hearse. After these four carriages there was a clear space of 100 feet, and then came the hearse bearing the dead President. At the head of each of the leading horses a police officer walked with hands at the bridle. On each side of the hearse walked a detachment of soldiers and sailors, four picked men from the army and marine corps on the right and as many more blue jackets under Lieut. Eberley on the left. Immediately back of the hearse marched a score of G.A.R. veterans, who had been assigned to this position of honor.

In the carriage following the Grand Army marchers rode Senator Hanna, Gov. Odell, Senators Fairbanks and Kean. Senator Burrows, Director-General Buchanan and two exposition officials occupied the next. Then came Col. Bingham and Maj. Thomas W. Syponds, who has been the acting representative of the War Department here since the shooting occurred. The White House staff, who were so closely identified with the late President, rode together. Mayor Diehl of Buffalo and city officers and members of the City Council were the last of the official mourners in the cortege. After them followed a long line of carriages occupied by those who had been near the President officially and personally, and who followed more as friends than as officials. None of the members of the family entered the carriages. As the funeral cortege moved south on Delaware avenue, toward the City Hall, it passed through a vast concourse of people filling the walks and cross streets and crowding houstops, windows and every available space of the buildings along the line of march.

RAIN IN SHEETS.

As the escort of soldiers swung into Frankfort street, a few drops of rain fell. The long line of troops took their positions at "attention," facing the City Hall. The carriages containing members of the Cabinet hurried up to the entrance. The last of the carriages was the one bearing President Roosevelt. Removing his hat, the President stepped from the vehicle and walked into the vestibule. When the hearse appeared, the four horses were led slowly to the entrance and stopped. The band some distance away began "Nearer, My God, to Thee." At the same instant, precisely, the rain came down in sheets, and, driven along by a southwest gale, off the waters of Lake Erie, tore across City Hall Square.

The casket was lifted from the hearse to the shoulders of the sailors and marines, and was borne into Buffalo's official home. Outside there was not a man, so far as could be seen, who did not stand, defying the elements, with hat removed, respecting his dead President. Inside, with steps impressively slow and measured, the bearers made their way to the catafalque. A moment later, and the body of President McKinley was lying in state.

INTERIOR ARRANGEMENTS.

The scene of the interior drapings was unique and most artistically carried out. Entering the main vestibule from Franklin street, the vision was greeted with the graceful sweep of festoons of black and white cashmere. The drapery ascended from the floor to the ceiling, and dropped to the mouldings, where it was caught in bows of deep black, thence to follow downward the contour of the building. A mammoth column, situated half way between the side walls of the vestibule, served to develop the arches. The column itself, reaching to the ceiling, became a monument of mourning in its garb of black. Color was lent by the large pictures of the martyred President, fastened on either side of the column, while companion pieces of like dimensions adorned the walls. Many yards of drapery converted the rectangular spaces demarcated by the column and the walls into two arches of imposing proportions, affording entry to the main corridor, where had been constructed the canopy of state under which the dead President was to repose, while Buffalo's people by the thousands paid their last respects.

Leaving the arches, elevator shafts on either side were literally hidden from view behind a perfect sea of black. Above the central point of the corridor, directly under the floor vaults was fashioned the state canopy. White and black cashmeres of costly price floated down in graceful lines from a point high up in the building. The purity of the white alternated with the somber of the black, reaching down in French drapes, with festooning of beautiful simplicity. Dropping down in impressive grandeur were four of the country's flags, so hung as to burst forth into a cross.

THE CATAFALQUE.

Below the tiled floor of the corridor rested the catafalque. It was covered with the same costly cashmere, relieved by six knots of generous proportions of satin material. Its head rose eighteen inches from the floor, and made a gentle angle, allowing the bier to slope to the foot. Stairways flanked two sides of the corridor. The balustrades were hidden from view beneath the conventional garb of mourning.

Mounting the stairway posts were chandeliers of six lights, burning low. The arms of the chandeliers were wound with black and white, with altar crosses. A radiator was swallowed up in a mass of funeral color, and back of this impromptu altar there spread out space not unlike a chancel, all in black and white. Behind it all floated another American flag of generous proportions. The enclosure for the catafalque was surrounded by banks of palms. There were pandans, arecas, kentias, bay trees, Phoenix, incianata and raffia worked into the general scheme of decorations. There was but one set floral piece. This was a contribution from the French Society of Buffalo. It consisted of two flags, United States and French on standards, the drapings of purple and black, caught in the beak of a pure white dove, framing the words, "With sympathy and regret."

This design occupied the central place in the southern line of palms. Later superb pieces from the Milburn house reached the City Hall, and were given places in the system of decorations. Of striking beauty was a white wreath, bearing in immortelles the name "Chile." Circled about the bier was a distinguished company. To the left stood President Roosevelt; at his left Atty-Gen. Knox. Then came Secretary Long and Secretary Wilson. Across to the right Secretary Cortelyou stood. With him were Secretary Root, Secretary Hitchcock and Postmaster-General Smith. Guarding the body were a sergeant of artillery, at the head; a marine at the foot; to one side was a sergeant of infantry; to the other another marine.

The casket was immediately opened to its fullest length. An American flag was thrown across the foot of the casket, resting against wreaths of roses.

A moment of silence prevailed. Then President Roosevelt nodded to Secretary Root, and side by side they left the scene by the rear doors, followed by the other members of the Cabinet.

Five minutes were spent in completing arrangements for the admission of Buffalo's citizens. Streamers of double-faced satin ribbon, white and black, were stretched from the hands of the soldiers and sailors, a mark to be respected by the throngs.

LONG LINE OF CITIZENS.

At 12:25 o'clock the police were notified that the body could be viewed by the people. A minute later and the first of the long line came through the doors. Solemnly they moved through the doors, past the bier to view the face of the President. Old men and weak women and strong men and children, leaders of men and laborers, all were represented in the throng that filed past. During the first hour the people passed the catafalque at the rate of 115 a minute, and at the end of the first hour it was estimated that 5000 persons had passed the bier. Outside the lines were amazing in their dimensions, solid masses of people stretching for half a mile in either direction. Distinguished persons took their places in the line at 3 o'clock.

Throughout the long hours of the afternoon there was never a cessation of the moving stream of people. In the early hours the function was rendered disagreeable by the violent rain, but at 5 o'clock the heavens cleared. The crowds grew larger, and it was decided to leave the City Hall open indefinitely. On through the evening the great crowd continued, and at 10 o'clock tonight there seemed to be no end to it. The police were finally given orders to continue the state function until the crowds showed signs of lessening. At a late hour the long lines on the street remained.

A Population of Widows and Orphans.

In the Lofoden archipelago, the great fishing grounds of Norway, are two islands populated almost entirely by widows and orphans whose husbands and fathers have been lost in storms at sea. On Titran Island, with a total population of less than 1000, are 164 widows and 636 fatherless children. People call it Widows' Island. In the spring of 1898, 186 fishermen, inhabitants of this island, were lost in a single storm.

The other widows' island is called Roedner, and its population consists of forty women, all widows, two men and a hundred or more children. They are the relicts of one of the most remarkable of all the many tragedies of the sea. It is a bleak and cheerless place, in the center of the best fishing grounds, and until 1898 there had not been a death in the community for many years. In November of that year one of the principal citizens, a fisherman and egg hunter, climbed a cliff of rocks to search for the eggs of the seagull and the eider duck. Making a false step, or slipping upon a piece of moss, or for some other reason, nobody knows what, he fell, although he was considered one of the most careful climbers in the community. His head was crushed among the bowlders at the bottom, and scarcely a bone in his body was left unbroken.—[William Curtis's Norwegian Letter.

A Japanese Artist's Discovery.

Gaingero Yetto, the Japanese artist who designed the stage setting for "Madame Butterfly," and has lately completed the illustrations for "A Japanese Nightingale," is very fond of taking solitary sketching tours in search of picturesque wild flowers. On these all-day tramps he often carries a simple luncheon. Disposing of the remnants of one of these the other day, a small paper of salt fell on a flat gray snail which the turn of a stone had unearthed. To the artist's amazement the creature began almost instantly to dissolve, and in a moment or two there was nothing but a small moist spot left on the stone. Ferreting out another of the slimy things, Mr. Yetto gathered up a little of the salt and repeated the experiment to make sure that his eyes had not played him a trick—he having never before heard of the salt and snail combination, the magic of which he declares exceeds any of the seed and flower jugglery of his own country or India. So charmed is he with his performance that he even contemplates giving a "snailing party" some time in his Fourteenth-street studio.—[New York Times.

Music Drives Flies Away.

"While listening to an open-air concert the other day," said a young man, "I was greatly annoyed by the flies, which were so persistent that I could hardly drive them away. I wondered how the musicians, with both hands busy playing, stood them, and I drew near the shell in which they sat to see. To my surprise I found that there was not a fly in the shell, and then, to my greater surprise, I discovered why this was. The sound waves of the music, rolling with tremendous volume from the shell, kept out the flies. The insects could not fly against the waves, though they tried hard. Hundreds of them were struggling frantically to reach the shell, but they might as well have tried to fly against a tornado as against those sound waves. Thus protected, inclosed by a magic curtain made of their own music, the musicians played Wagner, unannoyed by the sticky and pestering flies."—[Philadelphia Record.

Food and Children's Brains.

Children of wealthy parents are to be the subjects of food experiments by scientists in a splendidly equipped home known as the Chicago Hospital School for Nervous and Delicate Children, at No. 5201 Drexel avenue. Only the well-to-do can afford to send their children to the school.

The home can accommodate only fifteen children, and has more applications than it can fill at the present time. An annex is to be established soon, and the effects of food on the brain and body are to be studied under the direction of Dr. John M. Dodson, when he returns to Chicago from Boston, where he is understood to be conducting further researches in the subject.

All conventional ideas of a school are to be disregarded at the hospital school. There will be no desks and nothing to suggest an institution will be allowed. The idea of working out such a problem originated with Dr. John M. Dodson, dean of Rush Medical College. The hospital school is affiliated with Rush College.—[New York Times.

Mrs. Severance of St. Paul, Minn., has been appointed a special police officer and given authority to arrest malefactors. Mrs. Severance is the wife of C. A. She obtained the appointment in order to secure the authority which will enable her to carry out more effectively the aims of the Humane Society. Armed with her new authority, Mrs. Severance will act at once upon seeing a brutal teamster beating his horses.—[Chicago Tribune.

Weak on Its Foot.

Jimson in a rash moment undertook to plant a new clothes post in the garden, and after much hard labor he delved out a hole into which he managed at length to coax the post to a perpendicular position, and he went indoors a proud and happy man.

Ten minutes afterward, however, he went out to feast his eyes again upon the spectacle of the family clothes post pointing skyward like a miniature telegraph pole, when to his consternation he found the late erection lying prone across the onion bed.

"You pushed it down, did you?" said Jimson, wrathfully seizing his youthful son and heir, who was playing about near.

"That I never, dad," replied the boy, earnestly; "a sparrow perched on the top and overbalanced it. I seed him do it."—[London Spare Moments.

ORDER FROM SHAFFER WANTED BY STRIKERS.

Advisory Board Says It Has Gone Out and That the Men Gradually Will Return to the Mills.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Sept. 15.—Matters pertaining to the settlement of the steel strike are in a very unsatisfactory state tonight. While the telegraphic notice was sent out last night by Secretary Williams declaring the strike at an end, it cannot be learned definitely that the official order has been issued by President Shaffer. Some of the local strikers declare that they have had no such notice.

President Shaffer arrived home this morning, but denied himself to callers. Tonight his wife said he had received a special letter today, calling him out of the city, and he cannot be located.

The members of the advisory board said tonight that the order calling the strike off has gone out, and that the men generally will return to work tomorrow, or within a day or two.

What are considered the real conditions of the settlement, though not officially announced, are that the settlement was made only for three companies in dispute, the American Tin Plate, the American Sheet Steel and the American Steel Hoop, and those companies are allowed to retain as non-union all mills started in any kind of shape since the strike order went into effect; the mills that were completely tied up by the strike are to remain under the Amalgamated scale. Nothing was said concerning the National Tube, the Federal or National Steel companies. The settlement means a big loss to the Amalgamated Association, but leaves it still a strong organization.

It seems impossible tonight to make an estimate of the number of men who will return to work tomorrow. The threat is openly made that the tin-plate workers will withdraw from the Amalgamated Association, and form a separate union of their own.

What the outcome generally will be cannot be told for a day or two. All of the plants that have been idle are apparently ready for an early start. Most of them can resume tomorrow, if their men report for work.

There is much disappointment and anger among McKeesport strikers. The leaders refused to credit the published reports until late tonight, but practically admit now that all is lost for McKeesport. They blame President Shaffer for not notifying them today, according to promise, and still look for official notification tonight. It is not believed that resumption will be attempted until after President McKinley's funeral. Amalgamated men say they will not go to work till Shaffer orders them.

The American Federation lodge of the tube workers voted the same way today.

IN SAN FRANCISCO.

NO STATE TROOPS TO BE SENT OUT.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS.—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—The Governor of California has sent to the State Board of Trade a reply to its request that he call on the militia to aid in ending the labor troubles in this city and elsewhere in the State. The Governor's letter reviews in detail the assertion made in the communication by the State Board of Trade. He makes public communications he has received from the Sheriff of Solano and Contra Costa counties, stating that they are fully able to cope with the situation in the territory under their jurisdiction, and points out that neither the Mayor nor Sheriff of San Francisco has represented to him that any danger of violence exists in this city. He further says he has personally investigated the conditions in San Francisco, and sees nothing to warrant military intervention.

"Civil government," says he, "should not be supplanted except in cases of public necessity, and in times of actual public danger. The National Guard, taken from the body of our citizens, from all ranks of business, labor and professions, cannot be made a mere pretext, the sanguinary tribunal for the settlement of a peaceable dispute between capital and labor."

The Governor's letter concludes as follows:

"Whenever it appears to me that there is an 'insurrection' in San Francisco or elsewhere against the laws of the State of California, which the Mayor of the city, the Chief of Police, and the Sheriff of the county cannot, and if such officials can, but will not, suppress such insurrection, then the executive can, and I assure you that he will, step in and deal with the question, and, through the military power, suppress such insurrection and 'execute' the laws in accordance with the Federal, the State Constitution and the spirit of our laws. . . . But because it is very expensive and burdensome to counties and municipalities to protect persons and property and maintain the law under the civil arm of the government, neither individuals nor county and municipal officers have any right to expect that these civil duties shall be shifted upon the executive and the militia of the State."

FARMERS' COMMITTEE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—The strike situation remains unchanged. In accordance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of farmers held in Sacramento Thursday, a committee consisting of James Craig of Woodland, William Beckman of Sacramento and John H. Rice of Dixon came to the city today and interviewed the leaders of the City Front Federation and Frank J. Symmes of the Employers' Association. The entire subject of the controversy was gone over, the committee being made fully aware of the points on which the opposition fails to agree. The committee is expected to report to a convention of farmers to be held in Sacramento on September 25.

Owing to the fact that there was no quorum present, the Committee of One Hundred of the Municipal Federation of Improvement Clubs, appointed for the purpose of devising means of bringing about a settlement of the strike, took no definite action at their meeting this afternoon. A few acts of violence, alleged to have been committed by strikers, were reported to the police today, but no one was seriously hurt.

THE PULPIT LOOK: BEHIND THE CRIME.

Eloquent Words of Los Angeles Preachers in Rebuke of the Promoters of Assassination.

"But alas! We find few newspapers nowadays with the moral courage to denounce wrong doing and treason, whether it be outspoken anarchy or that flimsy veiling of it which manifests itself in beating and killing helpless men who dare to exercise the right of free American citizens to work for whom they will and upon such terms as they choose to agree upon."

These were the words of Rev. B. W. R. Tayler, rector of St. John's Church, uttered yesterday in the course of his stirring sermon on the calamity that has befallen the nation.

In nearly all the Los Angeles churches yesterday, services in memory of the martyred McKinley were held. Feeling eulogies of the late President were heard from all pulpits; but most of the ministers were impressed with the awful gravity of the events and tendencies leading up to the Buffalo crime, and they discussed them fearlessly.

Stimulating the seething brain and bloody hand of Czolgosz, many clergymen saw the excitations to crime and deeds of violence, of which law-breakers, rioters, yellow-journalists and waiting delegates have been guilty. These preachers looked back of the Buffalo climax, and spoke not superficially nor in well-worn platitudes, but with virile purpose and righteous indignation.

Who Shot the President?

The Church of the Redeemer was beautifully decorated, and appropriate services were held in honor of President McKinley. Rev. Jerome F. Hubbs took for his text, I Samuel, 1-25. He said in part:

"Who was William McKinley? A man, a man of large sympathies. The earth could not fit him; he took in heaven as well. All time, all eternity, all heights, all depths, all infinity, full breadth, thorough manliness—true manhood shone in all its fulness.

"No whining, no whimpering about the world going to the dogs. The world to him was a good one, but not as good as it might be, and he was going to help make it better, and he did.

"He had no sympathy in politics, or out of politics with men built on a scale of live by three trying to pull down our institutions, hoping to build themselves up out of the debris. He hated cant in religion and politics as much as Carlyle hated it. He was full of the gospel of hopefulness, the gospel of good cheer, the gospel of sympathy, the gospel of helpfulness.

"He was the monopolists' friend in maintaining and extending our credit and commercial advantages, in building up our industries and extending our borders. He was the poor man's friend as exhibited in the liberating of the American slave, in breaking the shackles of Cuban bondage and in carrying light and civilization to the isles of the sea. He filled our land with plenty. He placed before the poor man opportunity and filled his home with sufficiency. He possessed the gospel of geniality, the gospel of practical help, the gospel of a spring morning, the gospel of carnation, rose and palm.

"Great soul, gentle soul, sympathetic soul, suffering soul, forgiving soul, triumphant soul.

"Who shot the President? Czolgosz? No, he was only the instrument. The same spirit that hangs negroes in the Southland and starts a mob in the Northland shot the President of the United States. The same spirit that broke the wrists of a poor common laborer so he could not work and beat the faithful wife who, with dinner pail in hand, was taking her husband his mid-day meal—this spirit nerved the hand that shot William McKinley. All these law-breakers, mischief-makers, violence - promoters, trouble-brewers, mail-crackers and assassins.' All those men who feel called upon to rule this world like tyrants regardless of law and authority. All those ringleaders of tumult, mischief and violence help to assassinate this government in the death of our beloved President McKinley.

"The time has come for the enactment of laws making it a capital offense to counsel or even plot against the life or limb of any administrator of law, from the Chief Executive to the common police officer."

The Shame of It.

St. John's Episcopal Church yesterday morning was filled with a large and attentive congregation. The beautiful edifice was most artistically draped with the national emblem covered with crape. The pulpit and the Litany desk were covered with the national colors and hilary treated. The music was essentially suitable to the occasion, the offertory solo from Handel's "Messiah," "I Know that My Redeemer Liveth," being touchingly and feelingly rendered by Mrs. Hyatt, while the congregation reverently stood. The rector, Rev. B. W. R. Tayler, preached from Joshua xxiii, 14, and drew a parallel between the lives of Joshua and President McKinley, in the course of his sermon said:

"We now shift the scene rapidly from the death-bed of the chosen leader of Israel to the deathbed of the world's great leader, hero and martyr. Not under the spreading boughs of pastoral Ephesus, but in the heart of a throbbing American city, lie the mortal remains of our beloved, revered and respected President. For a week our nation has literally watched at the bedside of one who was enshrined in the most sacred temple of our heart's deepest affections. We have bent forward to listen to his dying words, so like the noble hero who spoke them: 'It is God's will. Thy will be done.' Never a word of hatred or animosity against the cruel hand that so cruelly struck him down. Never a word of complaint or faithlessness or question of God's power why such a thing was permitted. No: it was 'Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done,' every characteristic of manhood which stood so resplendently when he was in the full glow and vigor of life shone forth as of old when he grappled with death. The fortitude and the courage of the soldier, the calm and quiet dignity of the statesman, the beautiful and masculine devotion of the lover-husband, and the faith and trustfulness of the Christian—these are things which will forever hallow and sanctify his memory in the eyes of the world and crown the last hours of his mortal life with a glorious halo that shall never fade from the memories of the American people. Often in the hour of death the earthquake and fear as they stand on the brink of the dark river, but this man faced it as he had faced every problem and difficulty of life, with a courage as firm and as fearless as that of Joshua of old, whispering into the night winds which sobbed around his dying pillow, 'Nearer, My God, to Thee, Nearer to Thee.'

"Let us set aside today not as a day of anger and revenge, but a day of peace and calm waiting upon God. This waiting upon God may bring before us clearly and unmistakably those national sins and shortcomings which have done their share in making possible the events of the ill-fated 6th of September. The criminal who shot the President has been in some measure educated up to it and nerved to the act by the wretched newspapers and cartoonists who take a special pride in abusing and ridiculing our national rulers. Those same newspapers are often responsible for the rioting and bloodshed connected with our labor troubles. There is nothing more cowardly than the newspaper which incites to deeds of violence while it knows that the rioter and not the editor will be held responsible for those deeds. The liberty of the press has too often degenerated into a horrible license, and a shot in the back at a man's character and reputation simply because he is a political or social enemy is not many degrees removed from the shot of a revolver aimed at a man's life. There are some newspapers, thank God, which stand always for right and truth and law, newspapers which carry out the splendid ideal,

" 'Here shall the press the people's rights maintain,
Unawed by influence or unbribed by gain;
Here the patriot truth her virtuous precepts draw,
Pledged to religion, liberty and law.'

"But alas! we find few newspapers nowadays with the moral courage to denounce wrongdoing and treason, whether it be outspoken anarchy or that flimsy veiling of it which manifests itself in beating and killing helpless men who dare to exercise the right of free American citizens to work for whom they will and upon such terms as they choose to agree upon. Shame! shame upon that type of our national life! Shame upon the press that encourages it! Shame upon the man who calmly acquiesces in that violation of individual liberty which is supposed to be guaranteed by the flag and the Constitution!

"Perhaps the lesson that God would have us learn is that the man whom we have loved and almost idolized, the man whom we have elevated to the highest office in the gift of the people, the man who has done so much to exemplify the true standard of American manhood, has been the very man whom we have indirectly sacrificed to the greed of cupidity and the lawlessness of our times.

"It was not so very long ago that we gave our sympathies to the British nation, when Queen Victoria lay in the stillness of death. In many of our cities the Stars and Stripes were hung half-mast when the church bells tolled the passing of England's Queen. Today our own beloved President lies still in death, and our sister nation that speaks the same language, that has the same laws and embraces the same religion as ours, bows her head and droops her flag and mournfully sings the same requiem chant. This mutual sympathy and sorrow must go far toward assuring us of the stability of our Anglo-Saxon race, even in its darkest days. But that does not bring back to us him whom we loved so well. He has passed into the beyond of Paradise to hear the words of that Master whom he loved and served: 'Well done, good and faithful servant!' "

An Outraged People.

At the First Congregational Church, Rev. Warren Day, D.D., senior pastor, standing in the midst of elaborate and fitting emblems of the national sorrow, spoke in part, as follows. From the words, "Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion, Num. xxiii; 24:

"This is just what the people of the United States have done. The voice of an outraged people has been greater than the roar of a lion, and louder than the voice of many waters. Deep has been calling unto deep. Would that the miserable assassin and all those who sympathize with him might cry out in their terror, 'All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me.'

"This indignation of an outraged people has sufficient reason; it is the indignation of reason; the indignation of intelligent judgment. Patriotism cannot be passionless in the presence of such events as have darkened this land. Shame on us if we had passed the last nine days unmoved.

"There has not been time enough since the terrible tragedy at Buffalo to take in all its significance and relations. The assassination of President McKinley is a complicated affair. Its roots run everywhere under our feet, and its upas branches spread out over our heads. Yet many features of this cowardly business are readily recited.

"It was a treacherous deed. The wretch who fired his deadly shot pretended to be about to take the hand of his victim. And behind him stood a class who in fact share his guilt, though they will escape his punishment. I do not have words to describe the baseness of those newspapers which for months past have been doing their utmost to inflame the masses with murderous hate against him on whom, by vote of the people, the weight of this government rests as no other man.

"And in the crime which for the hour is vailing all other crimes was a betrayal of asylum; betrayal of the hospitality of this republic, under the shelter of whose flag they have come, and the protection of whose arm they are ever ready to demand. With few exceptions, they have come across the sea. Why are they here? Because there is such freedom of speech; because little account is required of their actions; because they have learned that the lash of the law is light upon offenders, and that, in ordinary times, little notice is taken of outrageous, political doctrines. They are vipers stinging to death the sheltering breast which has warmed them.

"The indignation of the people waxes hot against the assassin's work because of its utter folly. From start to finish, the method of the assassin for the removal of public evils is idiotic and futile. Reforms never come through treacherous murders. And to the folly of the attempt is added the useless suffering caused by the pistol shot of the anarchist. Who is able to measure the sorrow caused by the dastardly act of Czolgosz? And he looks unmoved, as his cult and philosophy have taught him to do, upon the woe which he has wrought. I am glad that I have lived to see the opening of the twentieth century. But that pleasure has been chilled, not only by this lapse back toward barbarism, but by the spectacle of a member of the United States Senate, who, being interviewed in relation to the violence which broke upon President McKinley, was brutish enough to declare that, to him, it was a matter of indifference whether the prostrate successor of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln survived or died.

"I would not unduly press the point, but our indignation kindles at the thought, not only of the chords of both national and individual life which this crime has struck harshly and hurtfully, but of other possible tragedies which this act dimly foreshadows. No one can now tell what other and ugly train of events Czolgosz may have set into action. Not least of all, an outraged people have reason for indignation because of the needless humiliation thrust upon our republic, institutions and citizens.

"So far, nothing more could be asked of our people. They have been self-possessed in their passion and noble in their attitude. They could not be more faithful and tender in their solicitude for the dying President and the strickened wife. It is for tomorrow that I am concerned, as I wrestle with this question, 'What will come of this uprising?' The people have indeed roused themselves as a great lion; not in blind rage, but in righteous remonstrance. But will they stand up in their moral might till that has been done which just now ought to be done? Till anarchy, and what most clearly is promoting national dishonor and danger, has been corrected? I fear three things; yes, four.

"I fear that our indignation will be transient, like the early dew and the morning cloud; that we shall grow indifferent till startled by some later tragedy.

"I fear lest we, as a people, fail to wake to the fact that words are live things; that we cannot sow the wind without reaping the whirlwind.

"I fear lest the men who have been doing what makes for disorder, though roused mightily for the moment, will fall back again into their old ways. And this brings the fear lest public sentiment will continue to tolerate, if not encourage, yellow journalism, outrages of public speech, political debauchery, municipal corruption and oppression by those who have the oppressor's power. And I greatly fear that there may not be the moral conviction and courage to expel that eastern Senator from the Chamber which he has so brazenly defamed by his proclamation of utter indifference to the fate of the murdered President of this republic.

"Said Isaiah of old, 'When thy judgments are in the world, the inhabitants of the earth will learn righteousness.' Will that now be the experience of our people? I fear that we shall forget, as we have forgotten before. We might well make Rudyard Kipling's lines our prayer, such as these:

" 'God of our Fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine,
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget; lest we forget.

" 'If drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues which have not Thee in awe,
Such boastings as the gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the law,
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget; lest we forget.' "

God Honors Great Men.

At Vincent Methodist Episcopal Church yesterday morning, the pastor, Rev. W. A. Knighten, spoke on the "assassination of the President, taking the above subject from Deuteronomy xxxiv: 5-6, "So Moses, the servant of the Lord, did there in the land of Moab according to the word of the Lord. And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Bethpeor, but no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day."

"God took Moses from the bulrushes of the Nile; placed him in the palace, educated him in a university; protected him in the wilderness; appeared to him in the bush; gave him victory over Pharaoh; gave the law in Mt. Sinai, and buried him. He met Christ on the mountain 1200 years after.

"Great and good magistrates are God's servants, like Moses, and as such are to be respected," said Mr. Knighten.

"Some of the dangers confronting this republic today are the abuse of liberty and of the term, 'free speech;' the monstrous cartoons of the yellow journals, such as those portraying the late President as the puppet of the trusts, the open defiance of law by those who want to run things in their own way; and the wrong teaching of children."

As some of the remedies for the ills which afflict the body politic in these turbulent times, the preacher suggested:

"Exile every anarchist now in America; stop every anarchist that attemps to land here and send them back. Make a law defining treason and hold the persons responsible for what they say against the rulers and laws. Let all governments form a solid international law and make a universal penalty. Let all nations combine a secret-service system to detect and bring to justice everywhere those who teach such infamous and devilish doctrines. Let the world apply their penalties back to them. Teach patriotism. Stand for your own flag. Venerate the heroes who fight your battles.

"Keep alive the church of Christ as God's remedy for strikes, mobs and riots, and trusts and all lawlessness."

Mr. Knighten defined an anarchist as "one who excites revolt or promotes disorder," and declared that there are many types of these disorder-makers all around us.

He eloquently sketched McKinley's career and eulogized him as soldier, statesman, patriot and Christian. The glowing words of the speaker brought tears to many eyes.

"The death of the President," said the preacher, "was like that of Moses, a triumph. God cared for him and gave him an immortal home with the martyrs that had gone before."

Fanned the Fire.

At the Westlake Park Methodist Church yesterday morning Rev. Dr. J. L. Pitner spoke on the character of McKinley, taking his text from Proverbs, xxii, 1: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." During the course of the sermon he took occasion to rebuke such ministers and Methodist brethren as have been criticising the government and the President both before and since the recent calamity, saying that he believed these false voices from the pulpit had their share in urging the assassin to the deed. The minister said:

"A good name does not mean merely reputation. It is a thing built on granite, as enduring as honor, as brilliant as truth. It is absolutely necessary if one is to achieve great things. Such an unsullied name as William McKinley possessed has two effects, one on the individual, and one on those who surround him. It gives self-possession and consciousness of power to the man who owns it, and serves as a goal for those about him.

"There are too many of our citizens whose reputations are measured by their silver and gold. If you turn the pages of history you will find that the men who left the deep impressions were not those who possessed the most goods, but those who were given over to a single high ideal.

"Such was William McKinley. Through tempest and through sunshine, through success and through adverse criticism, he labored on unswerving toward the accomplishment of his ideal. Today, on every lip, under all skies, in all languages, is prayerfully spoken the name of McKinley—because he had a good name. Great when the flush of life was on his cheek, he has proved himself still greater in death. When the hand of a fellow-man struck him down he did not cry for vengeance, nor demand that the assailant be pursued and run down like a mad dog, but on the contrary, like Christ, he said, 'May God forgive.' That prayer to the bended sky is sublime. There are so few great men of any age, that it seems necessary for the black pall of death to descend over the features of one in our midst before we realize his full virtue.

"When the late President was young, John Sherman once told him that 'if he would succeed in American politics he must concentrate on one pure ideal.' This he did to the last.

"The very heart of his ideal was his domestic love. He was the representative of ideal domestic life in this country, where matrimony is too easily dissolved. He was really greater for his home life than for his political life. Of McKinley one of his greatest political opponents once said, 'Against him the breath of scandal has never come.'

"I have often wanted to hang my head in shame at the criticism offered by Methodist brethren against this great man so far removed above them. It is easy for a vile cur to bark, it is easy for a crawling snake to hiss; but a man who is a man goes on unmindful of those who should be at better work. In the Bible we have been enjoined never to speak ill of a magistrate. These criticisms have fanned the fire that sent the bullet into the martyred President."

Effective decorations and appropriate music brought the large audience into sympathy with the speaker and the occasion.

At Epiphany Church.

The services were of a memorial nature, and the church was draped in appropriate emblems of mourning, a large American flag festooned with black hanging on each side of the chancel. The hymns sung were "Our Fathers' God, to Thee," etc. (an adapted form of "America,") and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," which the dead President was heard repeating to himself in almost the last moments of his consciousness. The hymns were sung with great feeling by the entire congregation.

Archdeacon Trew took as his text "The will of the Lord be done" (Acts xxi, 14,) with evident reference to the late President's dying words, "It is God's way: His will be done."

He said: "The assassin gives us a revelation of the depth to which man can descend and yet be a man. He illustrates human nature's possibilities of evil. The nature which in him has reached such degradation of feeling, and the mind which has become so perverted, are the same nature and mind as are possessed by you and me. You and I have no other nature and no other mental faculties; and if we are different from Czolgosz it is well that we should be made to ask ourselves why are we different from him, and how far are we from him?

"The lesson for us to take to heart is the imperative importance of Christian education. Mark what I say. Not simply education, but Christian education. For look at the two men. He was born in the United States, he was educated here, and his whole life has been spent in this country. This sentence, in its three combined propositions, is equally true whether applied to McKinley or to Czolgosz. There is no evidence that the murderer is without education. There is no evidence that he is not possessed of the same education in substance and extent as is possessed by the great majority of American citizens. The education given in the Little Red Schoolhouse is a great strength to the nation, and goes hand in hand with American civilization. McKinley and his murderer were both indebted to the public schools of their native State for their mental equipment for the work of life. So far they were on the same level. But to produce the great difference in the issue of their lives another element was needed; and it was the good fortune of the one to enjoy it, and the undoing of the other that he lacked it. McKinley was brought up by Christian parents in a Christian home, and Christian belief and practice were incorporated into his character. The other man seems to have been brought up without belief in God, and with no sense of obedience or responsibility to Him.

"The only real remedy is a slow and old-fashioned one; but it is the only one which ever has been or ever will be efficient in curing the wrongs which infest human society. It is the slow-going application of Christian faith and training to the will and conscience.

"The misery and evil which blacken the lives of so many of our population, especially in the cities, come largely from the utter Godlessness of the only training which is all that a large proportion of the children can receive. Some years ago I was told by the superintendent of the Reform School at Whittier that, having carefully traced out the antecedents of the boys and girls whose vicious habits had caused them to be sent to that institution, he had ascertained that more than two-thirds of them were the children of parents whose homes had been broken up by divorce, or by immorality without divorce."

The President's Godliness.

In the course of his sermon at the First Baptist Church, Pastor Joseph Smale said:

"President McKinley was a great statesman. As I view it, he has steered the ship of state through seas more dangerous because of the greater day in which we live, and, to use his own words, because "no nation can longer be indifferent to any other," than any of his predecessors knew, not excepting the period of the Civil War. Under his administration has been achieved the unification of the States. Our people everywhere are pledged to the Union forever. Under him liberty has been given to millions of the oppressed outside our own country, and our joy is great in seeing these millions, once treated as beasts of burden, rising to call their souls their own, and to have the opportunity to live as human beings. Under him America has become a world power, and is using it as a trust from the Almighty for the service of righteousness and truth and freedom, and if consistent with these principles to keep the peace of the world. What significant history has been made with him as Chief Magistrate. History that will throw sidelights on this man, and reveal him great in statesmanship.

"President McKinley was a godly man. The fear of God was before his eyes, and in his heart. Again and again he has reminded me of Lincoln, who was anxious to be found on the side of God, and when President McKinley realized the divine will he was as courageous as Lincoln.

"Beautiful sights in the closing scenes of his life have been given to the world. At Buffalo in his last great speech, he recognised on behalf of the American people the source of the nation's and the world's greatness. He hesitated not to ascribe it to God, and to avow his conviction that the Almighty's blessing must be given in order to the maintenance and the increase of the universal good. That was a thrilling and notable moment when he came to the last sentence of that magnificent oration and said, 'Our earnest prayer is that God will graciously vouchsafe prosperity, happiness and peace to all our neighbors, and like blessings to all the peoples and powers of earth.' In this one sentence the man is mirrored, and how noble the features. They bear the stamp of the image of God, the stamp, also, of a true American, intensely patriotic, beneath which was a heart so magnanimous as to crave for the whole earth the highest and divinest life. Let the youth of the land especially read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest.

"How beautiful, too, his last moments. God illustrated in our President's consciousness as the end drew near those blessed scriptures, 'The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear Him,' and 'them that honor me I will honor.' How sweet the peace! How joyous the sense of God! How sublime the resignation! 'It is God's way. His will be done.' And though to nature it is very hard, so we say, 'Thy will of the Lord be done.' And let us now comfort our hearts with the President's song, 'Nearer My God, to Thee.' "

"Flee as a Bird."

At the Washington-street United Presbyterian Church a large congregation gathered. The solemn services opened with Heller's funeral march. The pastor, Rev. Henry W. Crabbe, read appropriate scripture selections, after which the congregation stood with bowed heads while the organist played softly an arrangement of "Flee As a Bird," written especially for the funeral of James A. Garfield. After a fervent prayer Mr. Crabbe delivered a spirited sermon, which included in it a characterization of Mr. McKinley and the effects of his life and death upon our nation. "His life held lessons for the Christian world. To the citizen he presents the example of a brave soldier, an able Congressman, an upright Governor, an honored President. To the church member he gives the example of one who never rose too high to worship God with God's people on God's Sabbath. In the most sacred of human relationships he showed a tenderness of devotion that should forever remain a memory in the American home.

"His death, like his life, was beautiful. Like Christ on the cross, he prayed for the forgiveness of the one who struck him down. At the end of all he could say, 'Thy will be done.'

"The tragedy should unite us more closely as a nation. The hand that struck our ruler was aimed at all government and every law-abiding citizen. The common menace should prove a common bond. It should serve to draw us closer to the all powerful ruler of the universe. It should make us resolute to stamp out that anarchy which threatens the homes, the laws, the church, for whose upholding our martyred President gave his life."

The church was draped in emblems of mourning appropriate to the occasion.

The New Order of Things.

Rev. C. J. K. Jones preached yesterday morning in the Church of the Unity from the text, "I came not to destroy, but to fulfill." He said, "We are living in an age of rapid and vast changes in the development of our mental capacities and resources. Already we have become so habituated to the order of some new thing happening each day that we expect it as naturally as our fathers of one or two generations back expected and desired the continuance of the old order of things to which they were habituated. They regarded all change as an evil and resisted it. They made little allowance for the expansion of the intellect of man. This is seen in the laws they enacted and in the creeds they wrote. They concluded that as things were, so they would and should remain. The mood and tendency of our times are radically different. We recognize broader views and are controlled by them. Our fathers accepted authority for truth. We insist upon truth as our authority. They looked backward and believed that the golden age of our race lay behind them in the past. We look at the present and toward the future, believing that the best periods of human history in all its phases are yet to come, and hence we strive that better conditions may obtain. Certain it is that we now know definitely much of man's origin and history, and so can positively assert that the past is not entitled to be an unquestioned authority and dictator of all things in human life and its various multiplying interests.

"But there are many most excellent people who do so esteem the past and who feel it their religious duty to resist any and every advance of thought and belief which contradicts or ignores the past. They make loud and incessant protest against the passing of the old science of the earth and heavens, and the coming of the new science which necessitates the reconstruction of the bases of religious belief. To such good, but mistaken, people, the new order of thought seems destructive, and is little short of blasphemy, is irreligious. And yet in truth the new order of science and philosophy which enters into modern religious thought is most affirmative of all essential religion. It is true to human history as to all truth. It is just to human rights. It is tender to human frailties. It is inspiring to human hopes. It is intelligent and fearless in accepting all knowledge. It is reverential of all sanctities of man. It is boundless in its outlook. It is positive in its assurance of ultimate victory for every worthy cause of man. It is unwavering and absolute in its faith in God and our beneficent destiny. It leaves no want unsatisfied, and contradicts no rational belief or aspiration."

The President's Last Words.

At the First Methodist Episcopal Church, yesterday morning, the junior pastor, Rev. George A. Hough, spoke upon the above theme, taking as his text, Luke 22:42. After speaking of the agony of Christ in the garden and his teaching as to sorrow, he said in part:

"We sit today in the shadow of a great grief. America has come up to her Gethsemane, and in the death of our beloved President, we suffer a national and personal loss that saddens every patriotic heart. We have lost a President who was a statesman. No President since the days of Washington ever faced more momentous questions, and yet no President was ever more successful in maintaining the respect of our flag abroad, the dignity of the law at home and the confidence and love of the whole American people, than William McKinley, and today, in token of their love and as a tribute to the sincerity of his purpose, an undivided people stand about his bier, and North and South and East and West alike, mingle their tears over his ashes.

"We have lost a patriotic American citizen and a true gentleman. His patriotism was not only evidenced by the thoughtful tender of his services to his country in her hour of peril and his unswerving devotion to her flag on many battlefields, but also by the years of faithful service that he gave in times of peace, his respect for her Constitution and his confidence in the greatness of her destiny. He was a gentleman, dignified and yet warm hearted, sympathetic and approachable. He was a gentleman in the home. Loyal and affectionate to the wife who, in her youth, had placed her hand in his and trusted her life to him.

"We have lost a brother in Christ, for William McKinley was not only a statesman and a patriot, but he was also a Christian. Who can read of the occurrences of his last days and not find in them the unmistakable evidences of a true Christian character and a sublime faith in God? When a youth, he calmly rose in a Methodist prayer meeting and announced his determination to serve God and live a Christian life. He united with the church we love and died in her fellowship. Nor was he ashamed to be known as a Christian man. It was his religion, then, that gave him that spirit of tenderness, and charity and submission that characterized his last utterances.

"But though our loss is great, the circumstances of his last hours were such as to allay the bitterness of partisanship, draw men nearer together and call their thoughts towards God, for which we should be devoutly thankful. We ought not to trust God less, but more for this calamity. His way is always best. He will be with us in the future as He has been in the past, for America is called of Him to educate and civilize and evangelise the world. Let us seek to find in this catastrophe the lesson which God would have us learn, and then go out to live truer, gentler, holier and more patriotic lives than ever before."

"William McKinley was stricken in the Rainbow City by the inland sea; but he lives today in the Golden City of the New Jerusalem by the Sea of Glass. He went out from the company of the great men of earth to be forever in the presence of God."

First Christian Church.

At the First Christian Church last evening services in memory of the lamented President McKinley were held. A large congregation filled the stately edifice. The choir loft and pulpit were most tastefully decorated with crepe, flags and a picture of the President. The music was also appropriate. The pastor, Rev. A. C. Smither, preached the following sermon on "The Martyred President" from the Scripture "Thy glory, O Israel, is slain upon thy high places. How are the mighty fallen," 2 Sam. 1:19.

In the course of his remarks he said:

"The assassination of President McKinley in full open daylight by an anarchist is a painful reminder of the existence in our country of persons and principles diametrically opposed to all law and liberty. They are hidden volcanoes liable to erupt at any time to the destruction of life and government. A law ought at once to be enacted declaring all anarchy as treason and anarchists as traitors with a penalty of death or immediate exile on discovered. No such villains have a right to live under the protection of our flag and beneath the overarching of our sky. It is to be hoped that this terrible deed may bring about such a law.

"The life of our martyred President and his splendid achievements, rising as he has from an humble origin to the Presidency of the United States, must be an inspiration to every true American and especially to the younger people of this nation. He has achieved his success by a clean life and with pure hands. His personal character has been without reproach and his political life has been equally clean. Merit must have recognition and true worth must succeed. The American people are quick to discern the true and commend it to high places. The splendid life, character and achievements of President McKinley are a glorious heritage for a great republic like ours.

"In the life and death of William McKinley Christianity has won another victory. Early in life he accepted Jesus Christ as his personal Savior. In all his personal and political career he has been faithful to his Master. The striking traits in his character have been wrought out under the teaching of Jesus. The dominating purpose of his life, that of service to others, was learned from Jesus. His fortitude in the presence of death, his earnest prayer for his assassin, his complete submission to God in his dying hours all attest the great worth of the religion of our Christ. The great souls of earth catch the light of divine truth, even as the tall mountains first catch the light of incoming day. Great was the President in life, greater was he in death, greatest will he be before the presence of the Eternal.

"In these incidents connected with his death there is doubtless an overruling providence. The favor of God had been upon him from youth. He had risen to the greatest pinnacle of American possibility. He had probably reached the very summit of his attainments, had accomplished the purposes of God in his life, and, amid the tears of the people who loved him and whom he served he went up higher. The magnificent courage and faith he displayed in his death was the greatest thing, the crowning event of his life. He could never have wrought more grandly than in those closing hours of his life. Like the dying President let us look up with humble submission to our God and say, 'Thy will be done.'

"The same hand that has raised up McKinley and fitted him for the exalted service he has rendered our country has fitted in a peculiar way Theodore Roosevelt to be President of our great nation. He will doubtless lead our nation on to great achievements and will deal wisely with the great questions arising in our national life. God reigns and our country lives, and under divine guidance will go on in its mighty service to God and humanity."

DIRT CLEARANCE.

IT is a good plan for every bather to know something of the soap he uses. There is a well-founded objection to using a floor-cleaning soap upon the human body. Ivory Soap is the bather's soap. It costs more than common soaps, but the difference is in the ingredients and making. Why not treat yourself with a little respect? Is not the human skin with its marvellous delicacy entitled to pure soap? Ivory Soap—it floats.

CHIEF RECORD.

MOURNING IN PACIFIC GROVE.

Conference Sunday a Sad Occasion.

Memorial Services for Late President.

Young Man Killed By a Train—Young Crocker Has Legs Broken.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.] PACIFIC GROVE, Sept. 15.—Conference Sunday this year was far from a glad occasion, for the nation's grief lay heavy upon all, and the personal love of Bishop McCabe, a life-long friend of the dead President, made his bereavement seem personal to all. The opening services were like a funeral. Throughout the lesson, songs and prayer one thought was manifested. In every part of the services bore witness to the great man who is gone. Bishop McCabe was unable to preach on account of his deep emotion, and Dr. Bovard, president of the University of the Pacific, also an Ohioan, took his place. At the close of the sermon Bishop McCabe arose, and in a voice choked with emotion and with tears streaming down his cheeks, asked the congregation to sing with him what were part of the President's last words, "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

This afternoon Bishop McCabe ordained a number of young men into the ministry of the church. The missionary anniversary exercises, with addresses by Rev. Dr. M. C. Harris and Rev. Dr. George B. Smythe, were held

The conference held a memorial service for the late President this afternoon. Assembly Hall was packed to its utmost with sorrowing people, and the display of color in dress was very great. A large picture of President McKinley, draped in black and surrounded by flags, hung over the platform where it will remain till after the session Thursday, and white flowers adorned the chancel. The service opened with singing "Thy Will Be Done," after which Rev. Dr. W. C. Pond of Stockton, chaplain of the Society of California, and long a personal friend of President McKinley, delivered an eulogy.

ANTHRAX NEAR EVERGREEN.

FARMER'S DEATH EXPLAINED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.] SAN JOSE, Sept. 15.—Eight head of cattle have died on the ranch of John Bruns, near Evergreen, of what Deputy Veterinarian K. A. Spencer declares anthrax, the dread cattle disease. Other cattle on the same farm are also expresses the opinion that Gottlieb Haesler's death, which occurred last Monday, was not due to a snake's bite, as reported, but that he was having skinned a cow, which died of that disease, for its hide. Bovard scratched a swelling—a suspect bite.

HEIR INJURED.

LEGS BROKEN.

[BY WIRE TO THE TIMES.] BURLINGAME, Sept. 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Templeton Crocker, son of the late Col. Fred Crocker and heir to $5,000,000, was thrown from his horse at Burlingame yesterday, and his legs were broken above the knee.

The boy is only 13 years old, and, though never very strong, the doctors expect his youth to count in his favor, although the injury is serious.

FROM COAST DISATCHES.

Killed by a Train.

PORT COSTA, Sept. 15.—A young man named Seaman was killed on Sunday No. 13 here this morning. He was a passenger on the train from Sacramento and got off the train on the wrong side. He attempted to cross the track as it was pulling off and fell under the wheels. His body was entirely severed from his head. Seaman was a jockey.

[BY WIRE TO THE TIMES.] SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Anthracite coal laid down at $6 a ton is the promise held out by the Mexican Anthracite Coal and Mining Company, a corporation recently formed by local men with Pennsylvania capitalists. The price of anthracite today in San Francisco is $15 a ton.

The story of litigation, a clear title to which was secured by Alvinza Hayward, of San Francisco, A. J. Ullman of Los Angeles and Dr. T. D. Arnold of Pennsylvania, to 3,000,000 acres in the Mineral Valley in Sonora. The road is thirty miles long and is thirty miles from Hermosillo and twenty from Guaymas. The railroad is 56 per cent. carbon.

A shaft 200 feet deep has been sunk, and in connection from the Mexican Central requires 150 men shall be employed at the mines before the end of the current year. Orders have been given to cost $200,000 have been placed for the air-compressing machinery plants in this city and for hoisting and mining machinery in Pennsylvania.

The railroad thirty-two miles long will run between the mines and Hermosillo and Guaymas. The manager is T. Clarke of Pennsylvania, an old mining man.

The World's Workers-----Achievements of Allied Capital, Labor and Production

SOMETHING ABOUT STRIKES.

So the great Amalgamated steel strike is off, and another chapter is added to the history of disastrous labor agitation. If organized labor is to maintain any standing with the employers of labor and in the forum of public opinion, these organizations will have to take more care in selecting their leaders. These leaders hold a position of almost irresponsible power over the people who put their liberties in the hands of men like Shaffer and Debs.

The Debs strike of 1893 came to a disastrous and ignominious end, because it ought to have come to such an end, and in the nature of things could come to no other end. It was ill-advised, badly managed, and with no ground of logic, reason or equity to rest on. It ought never to have been called. It arrived at its end through violence and lawlessness of various kinds. That it should succeed would have meant untold injuries to all the industries of the country, and therefore to all the industrious workers of the country. The same is true of the recent strike on the part of the Amalgamated Steel Workers. The claims on which the strike were made were unjust, and the methods used were unmarked by violence only because the lessons of 1893 had not been forgotten. The underlying policy of strikes is always tyrannical. A strike is fruitless unless non-union workmen can be prevented from taking up the jobs the strikers quit. This can be done only by violence. The people of this country, the real people of the country, have reached a turn in the roads beyond which no more violence on the part of strikers will be tolerated. Laborers may unite. They may strike. But they may not say to any persons outside their own body, "you shall not take up the jobs we have quit."

It is about time certain weak-kneed newspaper editors and politicians who seek to make capital out of strikes began to see these facts. The striking workers are the ones who suffer, they and their families. Weak-kneed and confused newspaper editors and politicians will do better to get at the facts, see the truths that lie at the core of these labor propositions, work a radical reform in their own minds, honestly tell the working people the truth, and help to prevent ill-considered, disastrous and dangerous agitation like that underlying the Debs and the Shaffer strike.

These papers and politicians are forever telling working people some one is trying to coerce them in politics and make them vote contrary to their own judgment. What an infamous insult to working people. They are not being coerced, and would not submit to coercion.

Senator Tillman has been trying this theadbare method to get votes for himself. He says the cotton manufacturers are coercing their employés to vote against him. He makes a threat to do these manufacturers some injuries. The New York Sun says of this threat:

"Senator Tillman has made an open and unmistakable threat to the cotton manufacturers. Since making his speech at Union he has declared in private that his remarks were intended for a threat, and that if mill officials attempted to govern the votes of the operatives the Legislature would apply the screws in such a way as to bring them to terms. A half-dozen years ago this threat would have had a very marked effect, but now it is different. The great and growing industry can be hampered and affected injuriously by legislation, and several years ago Tillman's mandate would have been obeyed. Now, however, the Legislature is composed of different men. The industry is too important to all cotton-growers and to over fifty thousand operatives to be trifled with either punitively or experimentally. Local mill-workers cause the farmers to get a half-cent a pound more for their cotton than would otherwise be the case, and the factories are too important in many ways to the surrounding country to be attacked for political purposes. The Legislature that has shown itself so friendly to manufacturers will be unlikely to favor any radical measures that might cripple the industry."

The men in some of the mills struck, and here is the way that strike ended:

"The so-called strike ordered by the Textile Union against the mills mentioned could operate against no one in the mills, for all the union men who had declined to conform to the rules of the mills were discharged on Monday last. The mills are not seeking their return, and, on the contrary, have given notice to the leading agitators among the union men to vacate the buildings occupied by them. The places made vacant, either by the action of the mill authorities, or by those who may have voluntarily left the mills, are being rapidly filled by others. The mill authorities have no compromise to make with the representatives of the Textile Union, and are determined to take back none who are in sympathy with them. The vacant places are being rapidly filled by other operatives, and the mills have not been interfered with to any serious extent by reason of the action of the so-called Textile Union."

A gentleman, said to be thoroughly acquainted with the facts at Columbia, writes to the Manufacturers' Record as follows:

"A so-called labor union has attempted to molest us. We have refused to acknowledge them in any shape or form. At present seven-eighths of our mills are in full operation, and are short only a few weavers. There is no strike in Columbia. All obnoxious help have been discharged, and any obnoxious hereafter will be discharged.

"As stated before, there is no strike here. Seven-eighths of our mills are at work, and we have more spindles running and more help than the number of union help discharged. This is the true condition of affairs here, and this locality has been grossly misrepresented in other reports sent from here."

As to politicians and their antics the New York Sun says of the Texas Legislature:

"It is unfortunate that a great progressive State like Texas, full of opportunities for investment and eagerly seeking capital for its development, should be hampered more or less, year after year, by a set of paltry politicians, belching the draff of Populism. Most Texas business men regard the Texas Legislature as a nuisance. To indifferent outsiders it seems a perennial joke. Necessarily it is a good deal of humbug. The amount of union labor in an agricultural country cannot be large, and a union of farm laborers, managed after the manner of the Amalgamated Association, would be looked upon with horror by the moralists in the Legislature.

"Probably the Texas Legislature would not face a resolution directly attacking the obligation of contracts, but it has done substantially the same thing by approving a strike founded upon the repudiation of a contract and instituted by an association that is striving for monopoly with a fierceness unknown to any combination of capital."

It is interesting to note that the legal liability of labor organizations for damages to employers through strikes is likely to be thoroughly discussed in the courts both in this country and in England. Press dispatches state that the Taff Vale Railroad has instituted suit against the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants for $100,000 damages, alleged to have resulted from the strike of 1900. As a counterpart to this, advices from San Francisco state that the Pacific Coast Steamship Railway Company has entered suit in the Circuit Court at San Francisco to recover damages to the extent of $25,000, which it alleges to have sustained in consequence of the strike of the firemen and sailors which recently caused so much trouble in San Francisco. The suit is brought against the Pacific Marine Firemen's Union and the Sailors' Union of the Pacific Coast.

MODEL INDUSTRIAL TOWN.

The Vandergrift Graft.

The present crisis has splendidly vindicated the work which George G. Mc-Murtry has done at Vandergrift, Pa., says the Iron Age, since the days when the Apollo strike first led him into it. Mr. McMurtry, now the president of the American Sheet Steel Company, undismayed by the experience at Pullman and at other places in this country, determined to establish an industrial town at Vandergrift, in connection with the great sheet mill built there by what was then the Apollo Iron and Steel Company. He determined that not alone should close and direct relations be established between the men and the management, based on mutual esteem and a reciprocal recognition of rights, but that the surroundings of the town be absolutely healthy and attractive in other respects. At the old plant at Apollo the Amalgamated Association had been completely defeated. At the new Vandergrift works a non-union mill was established. The management strove for absolute fair dealing and for the principle of promoting individual men on their merits.

Mr. McMurtry studied industrial towns abroad, and, we understand, obtained many valuable hints at Essen. He was exceedingly careful, however, to eliminate even the slightest suspicion of paternalism. The model community which he has established has prospered exceedingly. It is composed almost entirely of native-born Americans, 95 per cent. of the men having been taken from the adjoining farming section. It is not a surprise that Mr. McMurtry has been proud of his achievement, particularly since the enterprise as such has been quite remunerative. His creation of a model industrial town, peopled by men untrammeled by affiliations with labor unions, has, however, now brought to him the crowning vindication. His men have stood by him, and by the principle of frank and cordial relations between employer and employed. The men of Vandergrift have practically unanimously continued to work. The influence of the example in the valley, of which it is the fairest gem, has been such that it harbors a group of non-union works which have proved of the greatest importance to the large organization, and have to some extent been the nursery of skilled men for other plants. With such a splendid proof of the value of an industrial town laid out on modern lines, and of a management fostering close relations with the men based on absolutely fair dealing, it is to be hoped that in the future Vandergrift will have the distinction of being only the oldest of a series of similar communities.

AMONG THE RAILROADS.

What Gross Receipts Show.

For well-known reasons exhibits of net earnings signify little in railway economics. This will be true so long as the range of charges to operating expenses for maintenance shall extend from notorious "skinning" to double normal requirements. Gross earnings, says the Railway Age, on the other hand, tell an intelligent story of prosperity or of adversity. Hence the value of the Chronicle's exhibit of the returns of the railroads of the United States for the six months that ended on June 30. The aggregate embraces 181,600 miles of line, including a few thousand miles in Mexico and Canada, and on this mileage the gross earnings of the half year amounted to $749,000,000, as against $681,000,000 earned on 177,000 miles in the first six months of 1900. This gain, amounting to 10 per cent., has followed previous gains, continuing without interruption since 1897. One-third of the second half year of 1901 is now past, and a good beginning has been made in the establishment of another record of advance upon the comparative fiscal period, next preceding. Nevertheless, it may do no harm to add that some of the shrewdest observers in Wall street believe that the culmination of the present era of national industrial prosperity has been reached this summer.

Steam is "Juice."

Reduction of fares to meet competition by electric railways has been tried by a short steam railway, the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn, with apparently advantageous results, both in number of passengers and net income, judging from the following statement:

Year.	Passengers carried.	Fare per mile. cents.	Net income.
1897	1,305,370	1.75	$97,500
1898	1,972,336	1.670	60,523
1899	3,772,451	1.370	47,112
1900	5,792,020	1.369	49,700
1901	6,496,808	1.635	59,971

While the average fare has been reduced in five years from about 1¾ cents per mile to a trifle over 1 cent, says the Railway Age, the number of passengers has increased to nearly three times the former figures and the net income appears to have increased about 60 per cent. But this does not prove anything as to the operation of steam railways in general. The Revere Beach and Lynn is a narrow-gauge road, less than nine miles long, and doing only a suburban passenger business. It is practically a street railway operated by steam, with none of the problems of local and through rate-making and operation, short and long hauls, freight and passenger business, etc., which confront the managers of large roads where suburban traffic is a comparatively unimportant matter. Yet the Lynn road in spite of its reduction appears to be getting about as good a rate as suburban business pays on larger roads, and a rate much higher than that usually obtained on competing electric railways.

How to Travel.

The World's Tourist Company has been incorporated under the laws of Illinois with a capital stock of $100,000 to establish a tourist agency in Chicago, where railroad or steamship transportation to any part of the world can be secured. The headquarters will be at No. 216 Clark street, Chicago. The plans of the company, as outlined in a circular letter, are to practically establish a union railway, steamship and hotel exchange and general information bureau, and to furnish tourists with general information; railroad and steamship transportation to any part of the globe; sleeping and parlor car accommodations on trains and cabins or berths on steamships; transfers by cabs or omnibuses and baggage checks; coupons for meals and lodgings in hotels throughout the world; money order books or travelers' checks, good in any principal city in both hemispheres; insurance policies for passengers and luggage, and passports in foreign countries. The company expects to begin business at Chicago about October 1, and later branch offices will be established in New York and other prominent cities.

New Air-fan System.

A system of air fans for cooling and ventilating passenger cars on railroads has been perfected by the Safety Car Heating and Lighting Company. A train on the New York Central has just been equipped with these fans and is now in service, while on a Pullman car running on the Erie Railroad from Jersey City to Tuxedo, there have been two in operation for some time. Two fans are placed in each car diagonally opposite, and are made to revolve by means of compressed air, furnished by an additional air pump on the locomotive, the air thus supplied being conveyed the entire length of the train by means of the steam pipe, which heretofore has served no purpose during the summer months. On each car is placed a storage tank into which the air is first carried, and from there it is taken to the fans by means of a very small pipe. The fan weighs only about six pounds, and when this is compared with an electric fan weighing between twenty-five and thirty pounds, one of the advantages possessed by the air fans becomes at once apparent. Another superior feature is found in the fact that these fans not only agitate the air in the car, but introduce into it a large amount of cold fresh air as long as the fan is operated.

MISCELLANEOUS MATTER.

Baltimore's Coastwise Trade.

Many things important about Baltimore should be known and are not, and among them may be included the extent of her coastwise trade, says the Baltimore News. Even many Baltimoreans themselves will probably be surprised at the showing presented in the compilation just made by the marine department by order of Collector Stone. From this some persons may learn for the first time that our trade of this character is, perhaps, not surpassed by any city on the Atlantic coast. Five thousand sailing vessels bring here upon trips averaging four a month enormous quantities of lumber, grain, oysters, fish, farm products and many other things from the tidewater counties of Maryland and Virginia. Many steam vessels are engaged in the same trade, and the inward business of this traffic is placed at 2,000,000 tons a year, "not 10 per cent. of which," says the report, "becomes a matter of official record." Naturally the city suffers to that extent, since she does not make the showing that she should in the great published commercial statistics of the country. The importance of getting and spreading broadcast the figures relating to this great coastwise trade of our city is manifest, and it is gratifying to note that the work is to be still further extended. The intention is to have a report of the arrival of every vessel, her name, tonnage, nature of cargo, and, if possible, its value; in short, the statistics complete. The information will be distributed widely over the world, and business men everywhere will realize the position to which Baltimore is entitled as one of the greatest of commercial cities.

A View of the Print Cloth Situation.

One does not have far to go to find the secret of the fussiness of Fall River on the wages issue, says the Lewiston Journal. Fall River has failed to keep up with the procession, and she would charge off against labor what is due to capitalistic oldfogyness. This is not true of all the Fall River mills but it unquestionably is true of enough of them to explain the uneasy heads of the Fall River directorate. But for Borden and a few others the fat of Fall River would now be in the fire. The trouble with Fall River is that too many of the mills have failed to put in advanced and fine-goods machinery. The crude is always more apt to be overdone, especially in good times, than the fine. The advanced labor of the North should not be used in plants that a fellow who is half asleep can successfully run. The position of the North in textiles was never imperiled save by northern neglect to advance from coarse to fine goods. Printcloths are easy southern game. If our mills in Lewiston did not spend many thousands a year for finer machinery and turn out more artistic goods from year to year Lewiston would not occupy the high position in textiles that the city fills today. There is no way to win out in the world except to keep up-to-date, and in a rapidly-advancing society like ours, consuming finer goods than any people on earth, it pays best of all to keep close to the band wagon. To charge off against labor the blunders of a coarse programme is neither economic nor humane. The passing of the coarse must be transformed into the advent of the fine.

Extensive Water-cooling Plant.

It is well known that the demand for cold drinking water is great in office buildings, and especially in those of New York City, where the heat at times during the summer is almost unbearable, owing not alone to the high temperature, but chiefly to the moisture in the atmosphere. In order to supply this demand the proprietors of the Atlantic building have installed an extensive water-cooling plant. The machine is not intended to make ice, but merely to cool the water to a temperature suitable for drinking purposes. It brings the water down to about 38 to 40 deg. Fahr. This feature will probably become standard in new office buildings.

Agriculture in Hawaii.

How great are the possibilities of Hawaii as a fruit and vegetable-growing country will be understood when it becomes known that four crops of potatoes have been produced in succession on the same piece of land within twelve months, says the Fruit Trade Journal. Radishes become edible in ten days after sowing. Strawberry vines bear fruit all the year. The berries are of the finest flavor. Cabbage grows all the year, and it apparently makes no difference whether it is planted in the spring, summer, autumn or winter. Parsley once sown grows forever, apparently. Lima beans continue to grow and bear for over a year, and they have to be gathered every week after starting to bear. Cucumbers bear the entire year, and so do tomatoes, which, with proper attention, bear for years. Raspberries bear for six months. Pineapples come into bearing when the plants are four months old, and bear in abundance for years. Lettuce can be planted at any time, and it develops quickly. The same is true of celery.

SOME SMALL SPARKS.

From Vulcan's Stithy.

The gold production of Cripple Creek mines in August was $2,554,000, an increase of $500,000 over July, and bringing the total of the year up to nearly $24,500,000.

Labor Commissioner Black states that the volume of wages paid in Connecticut during the present year will be larger than ever before. He declares that since the industrial depression ending in 1897, a general advance of from 6 to 20 per cent. in the standard of wages has taken place, and that "during 1901 the wave of prosperity has mounted higher than ever before in Connecticut."

The annual report of the Minister of Mines for British Columbia says the total value of mineral products in 1900 was $16,344,751, as compared with $12,293,131 in 1899. The output in the principal minerals was as follows:

	Quantity.	Value.
Gold, placer, ounces	81,500	$1,726,710
Gold, lode, ounces	167,162	3,456,361
Silver, ounces	3,464,176	1,940,338
Copper, pounds	5,207,276	1,041,455
Lead, pounds	63,252,621	3,691,697
Coal, tons	1,430,805	4,388,190

Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange during August were the smallest of any month of the year. Sales of stock totaled 10,771,813 shares, against 15,920,898 shares in July, 19,819,131 shares in June, 25,120,736 shares in May, 41,088,837 shares in April, 27,001,677 shares in March, 21,881,389 shares in February, and 30,207,003 shares in January. Bond sales reached $38,833,700, $64,000 of which were State bonds and $92,200 government bonds. Last year in August stock sales amounted to 4,008,985 shares, and bond sales aggregated $20,106,200.

According to the report of the British Postmaster-General, 2,753,827,000 postal packets were delivered in the United Kingdom last year, of which 2,323,606,000 were letters. Money orders increased 5.2 per cent. in number, and 8.6 per cent. in amount, while postal orders increased 3.98 in number and 4.36 in amount. The number of telegrams sent over the wires was 69,576,961, a decrease of .92 per cent. on the previous year. Trunk telephone business yielded 42,211,209 during the year, the number of transactions being 5,976,149.

The hope entertained by the New England manufacturer that he will be permitted to retain his supremacy in the manufacture of high-grade cloths is delusive, says the New Orleans Picayune. While it was natural that the South should commence with the manufacture of the lower qualities of cotton goods, it is certain that eventually the competition among the southern mills will induce the better-equipped to gradually divert their attention to high grades, thus again coming into competition with New England. The same advantages which the South possesses in the manufacture of coarser fabrics will hold also in the case of higher grades. Skilled labor can be brought south from New England, and it will take but little time to educate our own southern labor to work out the finer fabrics. Nearness to the raw material is an advantage as potent in one branch of the goods trade as in another, and the New England manufacturer must eventually recognize that fact.

NATIONAL IRRIGATION — THE RIGHT AND WRONG WAY.

The Engineering News, one of the standard and reliable trade publications of the country, recently published a long article on the subject of national aid for irrigation, in which the opinion is expressed that this will be one of the most important questions before the next Congress. The article in the News, while decidedly favorable to the idea of national irrigation, errs in leaning toward the mistaken policy of State control, as outlined by a few State engineers who met a short time ago at Cheyenne, Wyo., and presented in the form of a proposed bill. Doubtless, the editor of the News had not thoroughly investigated the subject, or he would not have fallen into this error.

While it is important that no time should be lost in taking up the national irrigation proposition, it is still more important that it should be started right. The Times has shown, on several previous occasions, the weak points of the State irrigation idea, as applied to the irrigation of the arid lands belonging to the government. We take this opportunity of again referring to this important subject, and call attention to the following points in connection with the Engineering News article:

(1.) It is true there is no division of responsibility between State and national officials. It is worse than that. It leaves the whole power to initiate a plan with the State. The Secretary of the Interior could do no more than approve or repel the plan as presented to him. The Secretary is to approve vouchers for payment for construction, but apparently it was not intended that he should have any power to disapprove such vouchers.

(2.) No more effective way of giving the control of the public domain over to those who now control it for grazing purposes could be devised than this State engineers' bill, because they would control the State machinery and could manipulate it so as to make it certain that no actual settlers would get any chance to locate on reclaimed land. If any were reclaimed under this bill it would all be taken up with scrip and desert land entries by speculators and stock men.

(3.) It may appear to have been drawn in good faith, but its practical workings would be sure to destroy all possibility of carrying out the ostensible object of its enactment. It might have been said of the Wright Act in California that it was drawn in good faith, but see what a ghastly failure it was.

(4.) National control will accomplish what is desired by reserving the land for actual settlers only, under the homestead act. It cannot be accomplished in any other way. If the government builds the big canals and reserves the land for settlers, they will locate it as fast as the water is available. No political jobbery could prevent this. The local influences that would control operations under the Bond Bill cannot reach the departments. That is why they cling with such desperate tenacity to some scheme for State control.

(5.) As far as national regulation is concerned, the national government could do just what any land company would do in the management of its water system, making rules and regulations to provide for its internal workings in uniformity with the State laws of water.

In the same number of the Engineering News is published a communication from Fred Bond, State engineer of Wyoming, and author of the bill referred to, in which he makes a number of statements that will not bear investigation. A few of these we will notice. He says:

"The central idea of the bill is that no money shall come from the States to be benefited by it, and from them in no. There is to be no tax, either direct or indirect, upon the humid states for irrigation, nor are the educational or land-office fees which are now provided for from the receipt of sales of public lands to be curtailed in any way."

The appropriations for educational purposes are not made payable out of funds coming from public land sales. If they were, they would take it all, nearly all.

"The first section limits the expenditures in any State to the receipts from that State because it was unanimously believed that any attempt to expend the receipts from one State in construction work in another would simply invite a continuance of the opposition to this plan which has heretofore defeated every irrigation bill introduced in Congress."

In no one State would the amount be sufficient to accomplish anything substantial. It would be frittered away, what little money there was.

"It is also provided that the works shall be self-maintaining and the reclamation fund self-renewing. If the works shall, respectively, so determine. This, however, was left optional for the reason that, in some States, a revenue above the maintenance figure might not, in every instance, be desirable, while, in others, especially those having only a small fund to draw from, it would be imperative."

Under the Newland Bill the cost of each system of works was to be repaid by the lands reclaimed under it, so that every dollar invested came back. There is no such requirement in the Bond Bill. The State may or may not reimburse itself by a sale of the works, and if it does sell it may sell for any price, opening the door wide for all sorts of fraud in disposing of the works.

"The provision permitting the actual consumers of the water to ultimately become the owners of the works is in accordance with advanced public sentiment in the West, because it is certainly in the interest of the settler himself in that it secures him against possible extortion under alien ownership, for his prime necessity. From the discussion on this provision, it appeared probable that some of the States might wish to divert the waters and maintain the works themselves, but that none should be debarred from disposing of them to actual consumers only, should the latter desire to carry the burden."

Whoever could secure the government land by any kind of a speculative entry could buy the irrigation works at any price they could induce the State officials to accept. Here is a chance for Col. Masuma, sure enough.

"For the purpose of preventing speculators from getting control of the irrigable land for other than reclamation purposes, and thus defeating the intent of the act, it is provided that land filings can only be received when accompanied with evidence of a permanent water right under State laws."

This is the richest morsel of all. Under the workings of the bill, speculators would get every acre of the land and the water, too. If they got the land, there would be no trouble about getting the water. All they would have to do would be to appropriate it or get a grant of it from the State of Wyoming. A single speculator could get a million acres of government land under this bill, by standing in with the State officials, and then buying the system, and so have "the whole thing."

As we have said, while it is highly important that no time should be lost in starting work upon the national irrigation of the arid lands which the government owns, yet it is still more important that this work should be started right. Better a further delay of a year or two, unfortunate as that would be, rather than the introduction of a system that would open the doors for fraud, and deprive home seekers of the last chance which they have to obtain government land, in large quantities, for actual settlement. Again we say: "State cession is eternally wrong, and the Federal reclamation of the arid lands, which the government owns, is eternally right."

AN INCITER OF VIOLENCE.

In another column are printed some extracts, taken at random, from a speech delivered—or which was to have been delivered—by the unspeakable John P. Altgeld at Brooklyn, N. Y., on Saturday, September 7 (the day after the shooting of the President,) before an audience of union workingmen. The clippings are taken from an advance sheet sent to The Times for publication. Whether the speech was delivered or not we are not informed. Any audience which could calmly listen to such a tirade against the President, the courts, and the government itself, on the day following the Buffalo crime, would not be composed of loyal citizens.

Most of the statements made by Altgeld are lies, and provably so, if it were worth the while to bandy words with so foul a slanderer of the government—and of the American people, who make and unmake governments at their will. But it is useless to discuss anything with a lunatic, a fool, a fanatic, or a deliberate liar.

Altgeld's words are the words of a man utterly reckless of the truth, and utterly unscrupulous as to the consequences of his acts. For years he has spewed his venom, his treason and his anarchism in the face of the public, to the disgust and loathing of all men of intelligence and decency.

If Altgeld's offense were merely the affronting of decency and intelligence it would not be so heinous. But his incendiary utterances have worked upon the evil passions of ignorant and superficial men, and have borne their natural fruit of discontent and violence and wrong-thinking.

The vile mouthings of Altgeld are of the same order as the outgivings of the putrid press presided over by Hearst, the pervert. They belong in the same category of infamy as do the damnable teachings of the Goldman creature and of all the foul brood of anarchist degenerates.

And all these monstrous teachings have led directly and inevitably to the great crime which was committed at Buffalo.

If ever the sacred and the blessed privilege of free speech and freedom of the press was abused beyond the limits of tolerance, it has been abused by the Altgelds, the Hearsts, the Goldmans, and other like vermin, which infest the body social and the body politic.

The American people are patient and long-suffering, and tolerant up to and beyond the limit of public safety. But a line must be drawn somewhere between liberty and license. While methods of suppressing anarchism and of putting a stop to assassination are under consideration, shall the Altgelds and the Hearsts be overlooked?

A Chicago man has invented a light that cannot be blown out. Youthful lovers of that city are hoping against hope that he will not have success in putting it on the market.

Lieut. Peary has summarized his year's Arctic achievements. Conspicuous among his reports is the fact that the North Pole yet remains to be discovered.

Beans are worth $3 a bushel in Boston now, and since the price has been going up the rich people of that city are said to be the only ones who know beans.

Those who want to get any light on Texas politics are politely requested to hike for the kerosene belt in that State.

Gen. Dewet and Sara Bernhardt are alike just now in one respect. Both are trying to master English.

The coal dealer is now preparing to appear before the public in a most business-like weigh.

It would be a naughty-cul trick to allow Sir Thomas to carry that cup back to England.

The potato is king just now, but "Old King Coal" isn't so very far in the rear.

Of course all interested Americans hope that the Shamrock will be II.

The pictures of Emma Goldman thoroughly bear out all that she is.

A NATION'S GRIEF.

Dead! And we sit wailing,
With ashes in our hair.
Dead! And the hydra-headed beast
Is still hiding in its lair.

He has gathered every glory,
E'en the martyr's crown,
We, quivering, wear the crown of thorns
On our bleeding brows pressed down.

Dead! McKinley the loving.
Dead! McKinley the pure.
The red flag flaunts in our faces,
How long, O Lord, endure?

Swift from the black cloud low'ring,
Strike with Thine awful might,
With the lightning of Thy justice
Wilt Thou the guilty smite.

OUR TWO OPINIONS.

Us two wus boys when we fell out—
Nigh to the age of my youngest now;
Don't rec'lect what 'twus about,
Some small deef-rence, I'll allow.
Lived next neighbors twenty years,
A-hatin' each other, me 'nd Jim;
He havin' his opinyin uv me
'Nd I havin' my opinyin uv him.

Grew up together 'nd wouldn't speak,
Courted sisters 'nd married 'em, too!
'Tended same meetin'-house onct a week,
A-hatin' each other through 'nd through!
But when Abe Linkem asked the West
For soldiers, we answered—me 'nd Jim—
He havin' his opinyin uv me
'Nd I havin' my opinyin uv him.

But down in Tennessee one night
Ther' wus sound uv firin' fur away,
'Nd the sergeant allowed ther'd be a fight
With the Johnnie Rebs some time next day;
'Nd as I wus thinkin' uv Lizzie 'nd home
Jim stood afore me, long 'nd slim—
He havin' his opinyin uv me
'Nd I havin' my opinyin uv him.

Seemed like we knew ther' wus goin' ter be
Serious trouble fer me 'nd him;
Us two shuck hands, did Jim 'nd me;
But never a word from me or Jim!
He went his way 'nd I went mine,
'Nd inter the battle's roar went we—
I havin' my opinyin uv Jim
'Nd he havin' his opinyin uv me.

Jim never came back from the war again,
But I hain't fergot that last, last night,
When, waitin' for orders, us two men

Odd Tale of the Sea.

Some years ago a vessel loaded with guano worth several thousand dollars caught fire in the South Pacific and was abandoned by the captain and crew, who came ashore and reported the disaster. One of the consignees thought the cargo could be saved, as he knew that guano would not burn, and it was his idea that the hulk of the ship might be found floating somewhere at sea. He chartered a small English tramp vessel that happened to be at Callao, Peru, and started out to search for the derelict. After cruising for two or three weeks he found her, the woodwork burned to the water's edge, but the hull sound as a dollar and the cargo all right. They started to tow her to Callao, but the day before reaching that harbor the tramp vessel they had chartered began to fill rapidly and the pumps could scarcely keep her afloat. They narrowly escaped sinking with all on board. The leak was a mystery. They managed to get her to Callao only by the greatest exertion. When the ship went into the dock and was examined it was found that one of the plates about the center had worn through. Further investigation demonstrated that the damage had been done by a little copper rivet, which had been accidentally left in the bottom and had rolled back and forth over the same spot so often and so long that the iron plate had been worn thin and the pressure of the water had broken through. —[Chicago News.

CHAMPAGNE FOR UNION DICTATORS.

Meanwhile the Families of Their Poor Dupes Are Suffering From Hunger and Want.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—Andrew Furuseth, strike manager for the stevedores, firemen, sailors and sea cooks who are "out" here, says he knows of no violence committed during the strike here. Furuseth, who is a Russian Finn, says: "I don't know of any violence being committed. I don't read the newspapers, and don't know of it if it is being committed. If there has been violence I know that the union sailors did not commit it. When union sailors have been arrested for disturbing the peace it is when they have had their little fights between themselves. They have these fights at all times, strike or no strike, and there are no more of such arrests now than there were before the strike began."

Of course Furuseth does not tell the truth when he says that he does not know of the violence committed during the reign of terror on the water front and in the wholesale district of this city. During the past eight weeks over 500 cases of brutal assault by strikers on non-union men have been reported to the police. About this number of victims of strikers have been treated at the public hospitals for wounds inflicted by the union men, or have informed the authorities.

At least 600 or 700 more men have been beaten by strikers. These 600 have not had their wounds dressed at public hospitals, nor have they told their troubles to the police. They have gone their way to their homes and suffered their ill-treatment in silence. Only a minority of those hurt care to make public their injuries.

Furuseth lies when he sets down the arrests of union sailors to quarreling among themselves. They do not quarrel among themselves. They relieve all their black passion in assaulting men who are at work.

Your correspondent talked today to a mother, who, with two little babes at her side, wept that she could not see her husband. He works for the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, and during several weeks has been unable to go to his home at any time. Once a week the poor mother and wife is able to see him for a few minutes at the dock and to be handed the wages he earns to support his loved family. This is not an isolated case; there are hundreds like it.

TROOPS MAY BE CALLED.

The managers of the strike do not seem to be cognizant of some aspects of the situation. Extensive building works are in progress at the different military posts around San Francisco, and a large amount of hauling is required for the delivery of building material and supplies.

At the Presidio additional barracks are needed to shelter two troops of cavalry about to return from the Yosemite, and other structures for storage and shelter purposes. Barracks are needed at Fort Miley, just behind the Cliff House. These works are indispensable and must be completed before the winter sets in. On account of the incessant interference with teams and teamsters, delivery of the material by the contractors is delayed seriously. The military authorities are looking into this and it may be a matter of only a day or two when troops with guns will see that the work is done.

RECENT ASSAULTS.

Paul Shaul, 60 years old, four feet six inches tall, and weighing 100 pounds, was brutally beaten by five strikers yesterday. For a number of years he has worked for John Rosenfeld's Sons, and has never belonged to any union. He left his home yesterday morning, and was attacked as he alighted from a car at Stuart and Howard streets. He was knocked down and kicked repeatedly. He was allowed to rise and walk a few yards only to be knocked down again. When he was insensible the five men fled. The aged man is now at his home, and it will be a long time before he will be able to work again.

L. J. Frennet, a special policeman, was going to his work about 4:30 o'clock in the morning, when he was set upon by half dozen strikers, who struck him from behind. He was knocked down, kicked in the face and several men even jumped on his prostrate body. Another special officer was passing on a Fourth-street car and came to Frennet's rescue. He drew his revolver and the strikers ran up the street into an alley, from which they fired several shots at the policeman. Frennet was removed to the Receiving Hospital.

Allen Jefferson, a customhouse teamster, was attacked by a gang of strikers at Fourth and Minna streets. He fired three shots at his assailants and then his revolver was taken from him and he was severely beaten and kicked in the face.

Special Officers Ballinger and Leslie were attacked by a crowd of strikers at Fourth and Harrison streets. The policemen saved themselves by firing into the crowd.

Policeman Harry West was forced to use his revolver against two strikers who bombarded him and a truckman he was protecting, with rocks.

Eric Sherwood, a Russian ship carpenter, was attacked on Main street, beaten and robbed of $20. He was taken to the hospital.

Michael Fuhrman, a peaceable visitor from Napa, was set upon by strikers on Montgomery street, near several well-known banks, in broad daylight, and was beaten into unconsciousness. Fuhrman had tried to explain that he was only sight seeing, but the strikers said he had no right to come here.

George Rice, a machinist, was knocked down at Fourth and Howard streets. He saved himself by using his revolver.

Peter Flynn, a union fireman on the steamship Ventura, put a pistol in the face of E. H. Finn, himself a union man. Finn denied he was a non-union man, but Flynn forced him into the White House Saloon, and there fired two shots at his feet, telling him to dance to the union tune. Flynn was arrested.

Strikers cut the rigging of a pile driver being used by A. C. Freese. Freese discovered that the ropes had been nearly severed just before the pile driver was put in use. Had he not found out the strikers' trick it is probable that several men would have been killed.

Kidnaping still continues by strikers. Four non-union stevedores were abducted from the schooner Melancthon, anchored on Mission Flats. The men were lodged and fed on the schooner to avoid interference by strikers, but a score of strikers overpowered the ship and took away the men. They have not been found since.

Joseph O'Brien, a union teamster, had all the unionism beaten out of him by strikers, who mistook him for a non-union laborer. He is at the hospital with a broken nose and frightful wounds on his head and face. O'Brien expresses himself as "again the union," since he has had a taste of its medicine.

EXAMINER'S CHAMPAGNE BLUFF.

The Examiner, knowing that the strike is lost to the unions, has made a startling attempt to end the strike and get the credit for its ending. Yesterday the Examiner's manager, who is William R. Hearst's representative here, called on M. F. Michaels, who is attorney and spokesman for the Employers' Association. He visited the Mills building at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and said that he had come to suggest a conference on the strike. He said he was willing and ready to act for the strikers, and that by conference with him the employers could escape the necessity for direct dealing with the strike leaders. Michaels was astonished by the visit, and by the suggestion that the employers would find it more agreeable to treat with the representative of the Examiner than with the men who are representatives of the unions. He told his visitor there was nothing the Examiner could do to end the strike, except to tell its readers the plain truth about the strike situation, inform the strikers that they had lost, and advise them to go to their former employers and seek work.

The Examiner's manager returned in an hour and renewed his entreaty, urging that a slight concession in the way of recognition of the unions would bring the strike to an end, and that this recognition could be extended through the Examiner, and no meeting whatever with the strike leaders need be had. Michaels told him to get out, and he left in a white heat, cursing and threatening.

The Examiner's manager, when he first went to see Michaels had just left the Palace Hotel grillroom, where he had lunched with Andrew Furuseth, boss of the Sailors' Union, and Michael Casey, boss of the City Front Federation, and of the Brotherhood of Teamsters. The Examiner's manager and Casey and Furuseth, over their cocktails, lobsters and cigars, had thought out a plan to end the strike, and the labor demagogues had been persuaded by the Examiner to let it "do the fine work."

This luncheon by the Examiner was but one of a series of wine dinners that have been enjoyed by the strike leaders all during the strike. A few days ago Secretary Rosenberg of the Labor Council gave a banquet, at which Casey and Furuseth were the honored guests. The next day, Jefferson D. Pierce, "national organizer of labor unions," was host at another banquet, at which the labor bosses toasted one another in champagne. While Casey and Furuseth were dining with the manager of Hearst's anarchistic organ, hundreds of hard-handed laborers whose fate they control, were waiting at the headquarters of the City Front Federation for a few dollars to buy bread for the hungry mouths of their families.

While Pierce, Rosenberg, Casey, Furuseth and the yellow journal boss told their funny stories over the black coffee and cognac, hungry women and babes prayed to God that the strike might end.

And this is unionism.

ALTGELD'S ANARCHISM.

Some Choice Extracts from One of His Recent Addresses to "Organized Labor."

Instead of government being a shield for the weak, commercialism is making it a convenience to feed the rapacity of the strong.

By means of tariff laws, land laws, money laws, franchises, bonds, and a thousand other corrupt agencies, government, both Federal, State and municipal is used to despoil the American people.

The right of trial by jury has been called by all statesmen the bulwark of Anglo-Saxon liberty; it is guaranteed by both Federal and State constitutions, but when the American corporations wanted to break the back and crush the spirit of labor, they wanted trial by jury destroyed, and the Federal courts are wiping it away with a mere wave of the hand.

The right of assembly and free speech lies at the foundation of all free institutions, yet at the demand of the corporations the courts are stabbing it to death with their injunctions.

The manipulators, the syndicates and the fierce birds of prey gobbled up the fruits of other people's toil, and then demanded a new system of government, a system which honest men did not need, and at once the Federal courts responded with government by injunction, whereby a judge becomes legislator, court and executioner, a despot such as Europe never saw; and all this in order to comply with the demand of the corporations.

Today corrupt commercialism seeks to absolutely control the press of the land, the lecture rooms of the land, the pulpit of the land and the thought of the land, and so far as it can it debases them all. It has destroyed the statesmanship of America, and made politics a cesspool in which men become slimy, slippery and contemptible.

We seem to have scarcely any statesmen left. The majority of our public men are only conveniences controlled by special interests, and manipulated by corrupt lobbyists.

An ex-Governor of New York told me a couple of years ago that a then recent session of the Legislature of that great State had been run by telephone from New York city; that the bosses simply telephoned to Albany what was wanted, and the members of the Legislature abjectly acted as directed, the bosses in turn simply voicing the demands of the corporations and corrupt politicians. The same story could be told of almost every Legislature in this country.

There was a time when the Congress of the United States, and especially the Senate, commanded respect, but that time has gone by.

In the spring of '98 the President, in speaking of the possible annexation of Spanish territory, said that forcible annexation was not to be thought of; that forcible annexation would be criminal aggression. Then the syndicates that wanted to despoil weaker people demanded forcible annexation, and before October the President deliberately planned to do that which in April he had called a crime. On various prior occasions the President had said that we could not consistently hold subject colonies; then the syndicates demanded subject colonies, and the President said yes, yes.

In December the President sent a message to Congress stating that plain duty required us to make the Porto Ricans citizens of our republic, so that they could trade with our people free of tariff duties; then the tobacco syndicate objected, and in six weeks the President swallowed his words and abandoned plain duty, the trusts being more potent at Washington than 70,000,000 of American people.

Congress and the President had solemnly assured the world that Cuba should be free and independent, and that we were not going to assert sovereignty, but would leave the island to be governed by the people of the island. The President repeatedly said this pledge involved our honor and must be made good. But when it came to withdrawing, and keeping our word, the syndicates objected, and the President has approved the measures denying Cuba her independence and keeping her in a state of vassalage. Today we stand before the world with our word dishonored, and our solemn pledge spit upon, all because commercialism rules at the White House and makes laws at the Capitol.

Only three years ago all America rose to put an end to Weyler's brutalities in Cuba. Today a Republican administration is making us a silent partner in the commission of greater horrors than were ever dreamed of by Weyler.

The practice of despotism abroad means the sapping of liberty at home and if the present corrupt and brutal spirit shall continue to rule, then free institutions must perish from America. Instead of progress it is a return to barbarism.

History shows that a remarkable fatality follows the winning of strikes by capitalistic agents.

A few years ago there was one of the most noted strikes in history by the engineers of a Missouri railroad, with headquarters in St. Louis. A Mr. Hoxie fought the strike for the railroad, and in the end won, but he did not long survive; the fates called him away. President Gowen crushed labor on the Reading Railway, and then went to Atlantic City and blew his brains out.

Mr. Pullman won the strike against the railroad men, but the grass is growing over his grave. He has left only a memory that is odious and a fortune that is the curse of his sons, while organized labor is marching on with new hope and new courage.

Mr. Morgan may win the steel strike, but organized labor will yet walk over his grave.

Trial by jury, free speech and the right of assembly are being strangled. Judges who eat bread that is earned by the sweat of labor make themselves a convenience for parasitic corporations, and try to crush the spirit of the men that earn this bread.

Jails become temples of honor when labor is wrongfully confined there; men wrongfully sent to jail become the world's heroes.

During the railroad strike of 1894, Judge Woods went to Chicago and struck down trial by jury and the right of free speech. He sent Debs to jail without a legal trial, and thus made himself the Jeffreys of the occasion. But Woods is dead, and Debs lives. The memory of Woods is odious to all men, who toil with their hands, while Debs is respected. The hirelings who persecuted Debs when they had no case against him are going down, but organized labor is marching on.

The money changers today own America, and they have acquired this power through the aid of government. You remember that when Grover Cleveland was President he not only secured them what laws they wanted, but he gave to a Morgan syndicate a secret contract to sell a small batch of bonds, and according to the reports at the time the syndicate made over fourteen millions on one little deal. This was only a sample deal, but it helped the money changers to take industry by the throat.

The trusts regard the Federal courts as their protectors. A railroad man in Chicago recently boasted that his company transferred all of its law suits from the State to the Federal courts, where they had not lost a suit for years.

According to the evidence in a Buffalo court the Standard Oil Company even resorted to the use of dynamite to destroy a rival. But the men who talk about protecting scabs do not complain when a trust crushes a competitor.

There is something dastardly about the act of a scab taking a striker's place. Yet he has an abstract legal right to do it, but when whole bodies of men are wrought up over a matter affecting not only their happiness, but their very existence, it is sometimes hard to get proper consideration for abstract rights.

During the revolution the colonists preached political freedom, yet the man who opposed them was in danger of being hung.

During the Civil War our Constitution guaranteed freedom of speech, yet when a man talked for the South he was thrown into jail, while if in the South he expressed sympathy for the North he was lucky if he was not lynched.

But I wish to suggest to organized labor that to attack a scab who takes a striker's place is not only a violation of law, but is foolish, for it does not hurt the employer. It does not even inconvenience him. He does not smoke one cigar less on account of it. If a dozen scabs should be killed, he simply gets other hirelings to take their place. What cares he for widows and orphans? He may be morally responsible for having placed scabs in a position where they get hurt or killed, but he will not support their widows and their children.

Instead of this, organize your forces in such a manner as to make the employer feel a little of the unpleasantness of a strike.

Send a committee to his house before breakfast to urge him, in a respectful manner, to arbitrate; let it follow him to his office; send another to his club, and the next day repeat the programme; and if the committee is clubbed and sent to jail, send another. Also, where it is practicable, send a committee of women to wait on his wife and urge her to use her influence to secure arbitration. If the employer leaves town, telegraph to the organization in the community to which he has gone to wait on him and urge him to arbitrate. You can thus by peaceable methods get results quicker than by killing scabs.

COVINA.

PATRIOTIC PROCLAMATION.

COVINA, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Correspondent.] E. G. Clapp, President of the Board of City Trustees, issued the following proclamation:

Whereas, In His inscrutable wisdom it has pleased God to remove from us our honored head of the nation, William McKinley, late President of the United States, whose long-continued and faithful public service and eminent Christian character will be remembered by all; and

Whereas, Days of mourning in which the people have been and will be engaged, and

Whereas, The deep grief which all hearts should manifest itself toward the throne of grace, and that we should bow with humility and seek from the Almighty and seek from the assistance in our affliction and consolation of our loss which He is ever willing to vouchsafe;

Therefore, in obedience to the proclamation of President Roosevelt, and in accordance with the desires of the citizens of Covina, I, E. G. Clapp, President of the Board of City Trustees of Covina, call upon all citizens of Covina to close their respective places of business and cease from the labors of their several vocations on Thursday, the 19th, on which day the remains of our honored and beloved dead are to be consigned to their last resting place, and I earnestly request all the people to assemble on that day at the hour of 10 a.m. in the rooms of the Covina public schools, there to render alike their tribute of respect and submission to the will of Almighty God, and of reverence and love for the memory and character of our late Chief Magistrate.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the City of Covina to be affixed.

"ERIC G. CLAPP,
President of the Board of Trustees."

MARIE GOT LOST.

Runaway Reform School Girl Lands in the City Jail—Will be Sent Back to Whittier.

Marie Avares, a young girl, is in custody at the City Jail, and will soon be returned to the reformatory at Whittier, from which she escaped a few days ago.

Detective Hawley found the girl on San Fernando street two days ago. She was at the time carrying on one shoulder a large cracker box filled with clothing. Under one of her arms there was a bunch of cattails, while with the other hand she carried a large watermelon. The girl was lost, and the detective escorted her to the City Jail.

Upon investigation, it was learned that she has been an inmate at the Whittier State School for some time. A few days ago she left there in the care of Mrs. Mitchell, one of the teachers who was starting on a vacation. At an opportune time, she escaped the attention of the teacher and, after collecting her personal belongings, came to Los Angeles. After arriving in this city she became lost and was wondering aimlessly when apprehended by Hawley.

His Air Ship Like a Bird.

A new British airship, upon which the inventor, Thomas Buchanan of Portsmouth, has been working twenty years, will be completed in a few weeks, it is expected. The inventor is confident that it will overcome the difficulties encountered by M. Santos-Dumona. Th great object in its construction has been to follow the shape of a bird, even to the head and beak. The principal steering gear is a large aluminum rudder shaped like a fish's tail. Passengers will not be carried in a car, but inside the body of the contrivance. It will be driven by two powerful propellers, one on either side. The gasoline motors and cabin are in the lower part of the airship, which is built of steel and bamboo, with airholes here and aft. The front of the balloon toward the beak is transparent, so that the steerer may see the direction in which he is going. The whole ship is surrounded by a covering which reduces and angles and consequently will lessen the resistance to the air.

Mr. Buchanan is confident of success. He says:

"My yacht will ascend or descend vertically or from an angle without carrying ballast, and without loss of buoyancy. It will travel at any distance from the earth's surface, at any altitude, in any direction against the wind at from ten to forty miles an hour, according to the head wind. It will cross from one continent to another and return and alight within twenty yards of the place of starting. Being under perfect control every way, it will remain stationary in midair for reconnoitering purposes or discharging explosives."—[New York World's London Cable.

War Does Some Good.

It took a big sound and a sharp prod to make China, the jellyfish of nations, move its ancient body and open its closed eyes. The booming of cannon and the point of the bayonet, which are so horrible as a rule, have thus accomplished a work that is almost miraculous. It is not the first time in history that the same thing has occurred. In fact, within the past 200 years war has done some good. The best thing that ever happened for England was when it was twice defeated by America, and it is not surprising that John Bull is now coming to observe the Fourth of July with almost as much cordiality as Uncle Sam himself. It is too early yet to tell Spain that the genteel trounding she received has done her a world of good, although the reports are practically without exception to that effect. Her industries are in better shape than they had been for years, and her people are using their money to develop their own resources instead of pouring it out in endless streams upon colonies which she could not govern.

War is bad; it always will be bad; but when it does something good it should have full credit, just as we are inclined generally to give a certain mischievous person his due.—[Leslie's Weekly.

THE TRANSFER QUESTION.

East Side people who have to depend upon the Pasadena electric road for transportation are pleased at the action of Attorney E. E. Bacon in pushing the fight for transfer privileges, through the institution of his suit in United States court to compel these companies to comply with the State law. That the companies are violating the law is apparent; in fact, it was conceded by the City Council when that body turned down the movement for transfer privileges. If there is any relief to be had from present unsatisfactory conditions, citizens along the Pasadena line want to know it. A few weeks ago, since the movement has been agitated, a prominent official of the Los Angeles Railway Company stated, in an interview with an East Side business man, that that company planned to extend its Daly-street service to the Ostrich Farm, using the Pasadena tracks. Were this done, the vexed question of transfers would be solved, but no extension of service has materialized, and the institution of the new suit is noted with satisfaction by daily patrons of the Pasadena line. Since the passing of the water-bond election, the transfer question has become the main topic of interest on the East Side.

This section is well supplied with school facilities, and within a radius of five blocks there are five fine schools. Church work is also represented by several denominations, and two of the largest charitable organizations of the city—the Sisters' Hospital and the Los Angeles Orphans' Home—are located in this district. DUTCH WIN TWO.

STATESMEN SHUT OUT ONCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] San Francisco won two games today from Sacramento, in the morning by 4 to 3, and in the afternoon by 4 to 0.

At Oakland in the morning they won the game in the sixth inning on a misplay by Hoffer and Hanlon. Wilson knocked a swift liner just off first base, which Hanlon stopped a short distance from the bag, as Hoffer made a run toward the station. Hanlon made no exertion to cover it, intending to throw to the pitcher, who did not get there until after Wilson was safely lodged. Wilson scored on Pabst's drive, and the latter was brought in by Krug's home run over the left-field fence.

In the afternoon in this city they shut out Sacramento in a snappy game. Krug and McNeely were the opposing twirlers, and both pitched a fairly steady game, the locals getting but seven hits, while the visitors were treated with six from Krug's delivery. The support the home team gave their pitcher was splendid, and in the fourth inning, although the visitors got threes bunched hits, not one of the runners was allowed to pass the second bag.

In the fourth inning, San Francisco scored two. Hildebrand was first to the bat, and sent a hot one into deep center, easily getting to the second station, and then advancing to the third bag by Schwartz's swift grounder along the third-base line. Pabst bunted and reached first on Hanlon's error, and Hildebrand scored the first run. Krug sacrificed and advanced Pabst and Schwartz a bag, and both men scored on Reilly's slow ball to right. Shay flew out on a hit to center, and Brockhoff's hit to second retired the side.

In the sixth the locals scored their fourth and last run, and Rube Levy distinguished himself by making a rank decision in calling Pabst out at the home plate, although he certainly was safe by a good margin.

Sporting Notes.

There was no yacht racing at Terminal Island yesterday, the sport having been postponed one week on account of the death of the President.

The East Side Stars Ball Club beat the Dog Towns yesterday by a score of 14 to 13.

A game of nine-pins is scheduled at the Oaks alleys for next Wednesday night between the Imperials and the Olympics.

There is some talk of holding a coursing meet next Sunday, or the week following, out in the open country. It is expected a new site for the coursing park will be secured by October 1.

The mixed golf foursome that was to have been played on the grounds of the Ocean Park Country Club last Saturday has been postponed until next Wednesday, and probably will not be played until next Saturday.

The Statesmen will come here this week for a series of four ball games. The first one is scheduled for Thursday, but as that will be the day of the President's funeral, it is probable the first game will be played Friday and the last on Monday.

The Santiago Golf Club of Orange will have a tournament on its grounds next Saturday.

CHAMPION JIM JEFFRIES SHOWS HERE TOMORROW.

HANK GRIFFIN WILL BOX HIM FOUR HOT ROUNDS.

Clyde Burnham and Kid Solomon Will Battle Fifteen Rounds as the Second Preliminary—Bernstein and DeCoursey to Fight October 9.

Champion Jim Jeffries, the heavyweight pugilist, will appear in Hazard's Pavilion tomorrow night in an exhibition and will endeavor to stop the local champion, Hank Griffin, in four rounds.

Just what the outcome of this meeting will be, no one can tell, for, although Jeffries has beaten Sharkey, Corbett, Jackson, Fitzsimmons and a big number of "dubs," there are a number of sports here who think he has a contract on his hands in trying to make Griffin quit in four rounds. No man in any class has a license to whip another man in the same class, no matter how much the difference in weight may be, and this is why some local people think Jeffries cannot make Griffin quit in four rounds.

Jeffries will probably reach here today with his manager, Joe Eagan, and Billy Delaney. It is said he weighs about 230 pounds, and of course is in pretty good condition to fight anyone. Griffin, on the contrary, weighs 178 or 180, and will consequently give away fifty pounds to Jeffries tomorrow night. He is in good shape himself, and has been training faithfully for his "try-out wid de champ." He boxes and wrestles Billy Woods every day, and for exercise, knocks out the side of his training quarters. It is much easier to do this than to beat the champion of the world, though, and Griffin will probably find it out tomorrow night.

No one expects him to whip Jeffries, for it is hardly possible that he can get both fifty pounds and a beating to anyone. Still, he promises to ruin the Jeffries' "slats," and the go should be a fierce one for the four rounds, for it means $100 to Griffin if he stays, and he may surprise "de champ" considerably.

This will not be all the fun, however. Kid Long and Young Taylor will start the performance with six rounds, and then Kid Solomon and Clyde Burnham will go fifteen rounds, to weigh 128 pounds at 5 o'clock. Solomon says this is asking too much of him to make the weight, as he could fight better at 132 or 134, but he is willing to take a chance.

BERNSTEIN-DE COURSEY.

Articles of agreement were sent north yesterday for a twenty-round fight on October 9 at Hazard's Pavilion between Joe Bernstein and Billy De Coursey, the weight to be 124 pounds at 3 o'clock the day of the fight. This is one of the attractions promised during race week by the Century Club, and it should be worth seeing. De Coursey beat Herrera, and if he can do Bernstein he will be in line for a match with some top-notchers. No preliminary has been arranged for this event.

BENCH SHOW ENTRIES CLOSE NEXT MONDAY.

ABOUT ONE HUNDRED HAVE BEEN RECEIVED TO DATE.

Many Special Prizes Offered for the Various Classes—Information That Will be Valuable to Any Dog Fancier Desiring to Make Entries.

One of the most important features of the Sixth District fair, which opens here on Saturday of next week, will be the bench show, which will be open to dogs from any place. Up to the present time about one hundred entries have been received and every thing leads to the belief that the show will be a successful one in every way. In addition to the prizes to be given by the association a large number of cups and medals have been offered as special prizes by various merchants in this city.

In response to the inquiry of a number of dog owners in this city a few of the most important rules and regulations of the show are herewith given:

Entries will close Monday, September 23, and as soon as possible thereafter each exhibitor will receive a ticket of identification and a numbered tag, corresponding with the stall number of his dog. When the dog is brought to the exhibition hall the tag must be attached to the collar, and whoever brings the dog must present the ticket of identification or the dog will not be received.

Every dog shown must either be registered or listed with the American Kennel Club previous to being exhibited. The fee is $1.25, including listing and registration, under the rules of the American Kennel Club. The fair association charges an entry fee of $2, and twenty-five cents extra for listing when such is necessary.

No dogs will be received except between the hours of 8 a.m. and 12 m., October 2.

The judging will commence promptly at 11 o'clock October 2, and any dog not in its stall when called for by the judge will be passed.

No dog shall be removed from the building until 5 o'clock Saturday night October 5, except by consent of the superintendent.

Every dog must be the bona fide property of the person making such entry on the day of closing the entries. If the entry is made in the name of an agent and the name of the owner is not given the dog shall be disqualified. The entry blank must give the dog's name, age, date of birth, and sire and dam and studbook number if already registered. Dogs need not necessarily have a pedigree to entitle them to entry.

Classes are defined as follows:

Puppy—Dogs over six and under twelve months old on October 1, 1901.

Novice—Dogs never having won a first prize at a recognized bench show, except in puppy class. No winner of a championship under English Kennel Club rules can be exhibited in the novice class.

Limit—Dogs never having won four first prizes in this class at any recognized show; but no dog having acquired the title of champion shall be eligible to this class.

Open—For all dogs over six months, no prize winner barred. Prizes for puppies shall be open only to such as are entered in the puppy classes.

Further information can be had from F. G. Teed, No. 228 South Spring street, Los Angeles.

CHESS TOURNAMENT CLOSES NEXT WEEK.

SEVENTEEN PLAYERS ARE IN THE PRESENT CONTEST.

Appropriate Prizes Are Offered the Winners—Harrison Now Leads With High Percentage—Expert Players May Come This Winter.

The second continuous chess tournament of the Los Angeles Chess, Checker and Whist Club will be concluded next week on Wednesday. Much interest has been shown so far and a number of very interesting games have been played. These contests have done much to bring the master game to the attention of a number of people who heretofore had not realized what it was. It is possible that one or more professionals from the East may be seen here this winter in a few games with our best players.

In the present tourney the players are handicapped by giving odds of the move, and a bishop, knight or rook, according to their ability as compared with players of less power. Prizes are offered for the greatest and fewest number of wins, highest percentage, most games, etc., and the tourney stands as follows, the results being tabulated every week:

	Won.	Lost.
Beyer	34	34
Burns	32	62
Candler	41½	13
Clark	8	16
Chippendale	2	3

THE HUMAN SAMPLE CASE.

I. Cigar Salesman: You like to see samples of what you buy?

II. "How does this strike you?"

A Model Husband's Way.

"Maria," he said as he entered the house, speaking before his wife had time to say a word, "this house is in an awful condition."

"Why, Henry——" she began.

"Don't try to excuse yourself!" he interrupted. "Look at this room! I was going to bring a friend home with me, but I refrained for fear that the house would be just in the condition that I find it in."

"If you had sent word, Henry."

"Sent word, Maria! Why should I have to send word? Why should any one who claims to be a housekeeper have to be notified, so that she can scurry about and make things look respectable? And that gown, Maria! It's outrageous to be dressed in that fashion at this time of day!"

"I could have changed it——"

"Oh, of course. You could have done lots of things, but you didn't. You should be ready to entertain your husband's friends at any time. I suppose the dinner is cold, too."

"It's not so good as it was. You're late, you know."

"Of course, and if I had brought my friend with me he'd have had to sit down to a cold dinner or one that was burned to a cinder, and we should have both felt humiliated and should have had to apologize. It isn't right, Maria! It isn't right at all!"

"Really, Henry, I am sorry that you are so much annoyed."

"Well, I wish you would try to do a little better. It's very annoying, very annoying."

And when he had settled himself in his armchair after dinner he chuckled to himself and muttered:

"By George, but I should have got a roasting for being late if I hadn't started in first! It's a great scheme. Guess I'll tell the fellows at the club.—[San Antonio Express.

A Millionaire's Kitchen.

Ament American millionaires, John Ashbury of California is spending £200,000 on the kitchen and cook's cellars of his new house at Philadelphia. The cellar walls will be faced with enameled tiles and contain the best refrigerators in the world. Milk, meat, game, fruit can be preserved in them for days and weeks. The fruit room is to have a special kind of ventilation. The chef and his staff will be provided with a dining-room where they will be able to enjoy coolness in the hottest Philadelphia weather. The "coppers" are to be lined with silver, according to the bimetal patent, as are those in the Czar's railway train. In point of cost the Ashbury kitchen will outstrip the famous Vanderbilt one, which was got up at an outlay of £40,000 only. The Shah beats in expense the American millionaires. His kitchens at Teheran were furnished at a cost of £300,000. But the Shah seldom buys without being cheated. In purchasing the American is pretty sure to have the worth of his money.—[Mrs. Crawford's Paris Letter to London Truth.

LOYAL SANTA ANA PAYS TEARFUL TRIBUTE.

GREAT OUTFLOWING TO THE MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Resolutions Adopted Offering Sympathy to the Bereaved Nation and Widow and Demanding Suppression of Anarchists.

SANTA ANA, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] This has been a day of mourning in Santa Ana over the death of the President. In all the churches this morning reference was made by the ministers to the great calamity that has befallen the nation by the untimely ending of the life of the country's Chief Magistrate by the hand of an assassin, and this afternoon the new Methodist Episcopal Church, which seats 1000 people, was not large enough to accommodate the crowd that assembled to pay respects to the memory of the deceased President. At 2:30 o'clock the old soldiers met at G.A.R. Hall, and together with Co. L, N.G.C., Damon Company, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, of which order the President was an exalted officer, and officers and ex-members of the regular army and National Guard, and citizens marched to the church, headed by the Santa Ana brass band, playing the funeral dirge. Slowly the procession moved north to the church, and upon entering the audience arose and remained standing until the body of the procession had been seated. The band in the gallery played "Nearer, My God, to Thee," the choir sang "Servant of God, Well Done," while the audience stood, and Rev. J. B. Green prayed that God would minister to the sorrow of a nation, and asked such help from Him that all could say, "Thy will, not ours, be done."

Comrade E. T. Langley then delivered the memorial address, which was full of pathos and sympathy. At the conclusion of the address Comrade Cook read a set of resolutions advocating the utter destruction of anarchism in the United States, and recommending the amendment of our laws so as to prevent the landing of anarchists in our country. This sentiment was loudly applauded, after which they were unanimously adopted by a rising vote from the Grand Army and National Guard members.

Rev. J. H. Cooper made a short prayer, after which the audience joined in "America," and the benediction was pronounced, the soldier contingent leaving in a body.

The resolution adopted follows:

"Whereas, we, members of Sedgwick Post, No. 17, G.A.R., Department of California and Nevada, and all soldiers present of the Spanish and Philippine wars, and companies of the State militia, have assembled in special session this day for the purpose of attempting to give some expression of the profound sorrow which fills our hearts, because of the death of our beloved comrade, William McKinley, the honored President of the United States, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that in the death of our late President the nation has met with a loss that is irreparable; that to Mrs. McKinley, in her sad affliction, we extend our sincere and heartfelt sympathy; that we mourn with her the loss of one who was not only admired, but beloved by all; of one whose noble endeavor and superb achievements were only equaled by the sublime virtues of his private life; and be it further

"Resolved, that we, as American citizens, fully believe in free speech, a free press, and all the rights guaranteed to us by the Constitution of the United States; yet, as such citizens, and as soldiers, who have fought to maintain this constitutional freedom in this, our beloved land, seeing our comrade and Commander-in-Chief, who marched and fought with us, stricken down by the foul hand of an assassin, we believe that the time has come when we must more clearly distinguish between those constitutional rights and license; we, therefore ask, and earnestly urge, our national and State legislative bodies to pass proper laws, punishing with death any attempt upon the life of the President or the Vice-President of the United States, whereby the nation might be deprived of its chief executive officers, and that a like punishment be meted out to those who advocate, approve or encourage such attempt; and further that our emigration laws be so amended, that no such person be permitted to land upon our shores, and that all such persons now in our midst be banished from our country or placed under proper restraint to the end that the imported propaganda of anarchy and murder shall be effectually destroyed."

Col. Tuffree, at the head of the enterprise, states that arrangements have been made for a number of brick buildings in the new city, and he is assured of at least one railroad. It is reported that a number of employés at the oil wells will purchase lots in the new town and erect cottages thereon, as they cannot buy land on any of the oil leases, and the new town will be the closest settled-up section to the oil wells in the Santa Fé oil-well district.

LOMPOC.

IRRIGATION ENTERPRISE.

LOMPOC, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] At the second meeting of citizens to discuss irrigation matters today the report of the committee appointed to have the canal route surveyed and the cost estimated, was received. The report consisted chiefly of descriptions and estimates submitted to Civil Engineer Richards, who reports that a dam can be put in the river at the narrows; that the water can be brought two miles down along the sides of the hills in flumes, ditches and one tunnel, and then siphoned under the river to the west side, being delivered at a favorable point for distribution over the valley; that all of this can be done at a total cost of $21,000. Many questions concerning the Wright law were asked of, and much explanation made by, Supervisor Broughton. A collection was taken to defray the incidental expenses incurred. A soliciting committee was appointed to raise funds for future incidentals, and steps were taken to start among the property-holders a petition to the Supervisors to submit the question of organizing an irrigating district to the voters. Hon. Alexander McLean, the chairman of the citizens' meeting, said this afternoon: "The outlook for irrigation in Lompoc is more hopeful than ever before; we are going at this matter in a thoughtful, careful way, and mean to do our work thoroughly."

JALAMA OIL WELL.

The drilling outfit at the Jalama ranch has been steadily at work for a week. Nettleton & Kellerman, the contractors, have a 74-foot derrick, a drill operated by a steam engine, and have a 14-inch hole about one hundred and fifty feet down. Al Seguine, the driller, reports that this entire distance has been through a ledge of sandstone not over twenty feet thick, but owing to its nearly vertical position, a great depth has to be reached to get through it. Harrison Dibble, the owner of the Jalama ranch, and the manager of the entire project, has by the aid of ex-State Mineralogist A. S. Cooper and others, chosen this site for boring for oil, in the bottom of a cañon, about four miles from the ocean, and about twenty-eight miles from Lompoc.

NEW BANK ORGANIZED AT SANTA MARIA.

WILL BE READY FOR BUSINESS IN NEAR FUTURE.

Oil Industry Stimulated by the Gusher on the Careaga Ranch—Circus Excursion Train Breaks in Two—Santa Maria Brevities.

SANTA MARIA, Sept. 14.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] The first meeting of the stockholders of the Valley Savings Bank was held on Wednesday afternoon, when by-laws of the institution were enacted, rates of interest established for depositors and borrowers, and officers were elected to serve until the regular annual meeting in January. It was decided to open the bank for business as soon as the seal of the Secretary of State can be obtained, which it is thought will be here early next week. William Rice was elected president; Madison Thornburg, vice-president; Thomas Adams, cashier, and William Rice, M. Thornburg, J. B. Bonetti, M. Sonza, and L. E. Blochman, directors. Fifty per cent. of the stock has been paid in and is available.

NEW OIL COMPANY.

Since the gusher oil well has been developed by the Western Union Company on the Careaga ranch, a new company of local capitalists has been organized, called the Pinal Oil and Development Company. At their first meeting on Thursday night an organization was effected with the following trustees: Messrs. M. Fleisher, S. Fleisher, D. D. Bovnard, J. F. Goodman, A. H. McKay, J. W. Atkinson, E. W. Clark, Pat Moore, and C. E. Reed. The company has authorized the sale of 100,000 shares of stock at 50 cents per share. About $30,000 has already been subscribed, and operations will begin in the near future. The projectors have purchased 150 acres of land close to the Careaga ranch.

Santa Maria is to be made the headquarters for oil-well supplies of the San Francisco Supply Company, Fairbanks, Morse & Co., and in the near future twenty carloads of machinery, casing, fishing tools, cables, etc., will be shipped to this point.

A barbecue has been arranged by A. H. McKay and the Careaga brothers, to be given tomorrow at the oil-well. The business men of Santa Maria and prominent citizens have been invited and most of these, with many others will be on hand.

CIRCUS TRAIN'S MISHAP.

Four hundred passengers left here on Wednesday, on the circus train, for San Luis Obispo, part of them being obliged to go in box cars, as the railroad company, not anticipating so large patronage, had not provided sufficient passenger car accommodations. It is estimated that twelve thousand people visited the circus. The return train to this city, having reached the bridge spanning the Santa Maria River, it was discovered that three box cars, containing many passengers, were missing. These were picked up nearly a mile north of Nipoma, a distance of eight miles from where the discovery was made. It is supposed some practical joker pulled the coupling pin. The train was thus delayed, arriving here at 10 o'clock at night.

SANTA MARIA BREVITIES.

A young man named Thomas Felix was seriously kicked by a horse last Monday morning, at the Underhill ranch, near Los Alamos. Felix was employed by S. F. Coiner as sack-sewer with a threshing crew. Passing close behind a horse standing near the machine, the vicious animal kicked him with his hoof on the right side of the head, striking far enough away to lessen the force of the blow, but serious, a fractured skull. Judge Morris, while riding one of the Suey ranch mules, encountered a swarm of bees, and while dismounted, was severely stung. His horse also received numerous stings, causing him to run away.

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Correspondent.] Earl Thompson, a Colton boy, 11 years old, was locked up in the County Jail last evening, charged with burglary. Last Friday the little fellow, accompanied by his seven-year-old brother and a twelve-year-old boy named Burdick, broke into Thomas Allen's house on Mt. Vernon avenue and stole a number of articles. The three boys had their preliminary examination yesterday before Justice Hanna of Colton, who held Earl for trial in the Superior Court, but dismissed Leo and the Burdick boy from custody. The boy's father is working at Santa Ana. The mother is lying sick in bed at her home in Colton. The boy broke down when put behind the bars, and cried for his home and mother. He is being cared for at present by the trusty. The Thompson boys have been in bad repute for their waywardness for some time. Some months ago they were called to account for breaking into a schoolhouse.

NEW ATHLETIC CLUB.

The new clubrooms of the reorganized San Bernardino Athletic Club were formally opened last evening. In front is the reading-room. Back of this are the gymnasium and handball court, and in the rear spacious shower baths. The matter of organizing a baseball nine, a football eleven and a track team was favorably discussed last evening. It was decided to co-operate with A. C. Denman, Jr., who has offered the use of practice grounds at Urbita Springs. The club starts with about one hundred members.

RIVERSIDE HONORS THE MARTYR PRESIDENT.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD IN METHODIST CHURCH.

Thrilling Patriotic Sermon Preached by Rev. B. S. Haywood—Similar Observances in Other Churches—Death of James Vigus—Riverside News Briefs.

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] A memorial service was held this morning at the First Methodist Church in honor of President McKinley. The spacious auditorium was crowded to its utmost capacity, Riverside Post, G.A.R., the Woman's Relief Corps and Co. M, Seventh California National Guard, attending in their respective bodies.

The pastor, Rev. Benjamin S. Haywood, directed the thought of the congregation to a life study of one "who not only recently governed a republic, but possessed a republic in his brain and heart." He took for his text, "All the people wept, for behold, the Lord of Hosts doth take away from Jerusalem and from Judah the stay and the staff, the mighty man, and the man of war, the judge and the prophet, and the prudent, and the honorable man, and the counsellor, and the eloquent orator."

A more thrilling or patriotic address has never been heard in Riverside. After describing in eloquent and forceful language the facts connected with the dastardly crime that laid low the great President, the speaker said that there are imperishable lessons that should be garnered in the study of the life of such a man, and proceeded to discuss them under three groupings: McKinley, as a warrior and patriot; as a statesman and ruler; as a Christian man and citizen. The service closed with the signing of that noble hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," which was on the lips of the dying President.

Boat Rocking as a Crime.

Last Sunday evening Frank Rhinehart of Hagerstown, Md., took two young women for a boat ride on Lake Royer. He "rocked the boat" to frighten the girls. It upset and Mary Finifrock of York, Pa., was drowned. Rhinehart helped rescue the other girl, and, of course, protested that he "didn't mean" any harm.

The coroner's jury has declined to accept this excuse. It has found that "Frank Rhinehart wilfully and feloniously killed and murdered Mary Finifrock," and has recommended that he be held to trial for the crime. Of course the charge might have been made graver than the evidence justified. For murder there must be a malicious intent. But Rhinehart's conduct was certainly criminally careless, and it resulted in a homicide.

It is to be hoped that the charge made by the Hagerstown Coroner's jury will be pushed to conviction and a proper sentence imposed. The sort of fool who rocks the boat, aims laded firearms, and indulges in other jokes likely to result fatally has become scandalously destructive in this country. If sending a few such creatures to the penitentiary will abate the nuisance, the general public will applaud both the method and the result.

The Hagerstown jury has set a precedent that may profitably be followed in Chicago and elsewhere. If every boat rocker and similar idiot can be convinced that his folly will certainly result in a criminal prosecution and may lead to a long term in prison, such forms of amusement will rapidly decline in favor. That they should so decline is a consummation devoutly to be wished.—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Notified Colored Parsons.

An English woman now residing in New York, whose first visit to this country was made about two years ago, tells of an experience which she had shortly after her arrival. She was spending some weeks with friends in a small town in a Southern State, and one evening, returning from a call, she discovered that she had lost a valuable boa. The next day she put advertisements in the three papers that the town boasted, and awaited developments. No answers were received to the advertisements, although a liberal reward had been offered, and the English visitor commented in the hearing of a resident upon the non-appearance of her boa, and told the methods that had been adopted for its recovery.

"But you also notified the colored ministers, didn't you?" asked the southern woman, "and requested that a notice be read in the churches next Sunday?" "Why, I never thought of doing such a thing," was the reply. "Well, try it," suggested the southerner, "and see how it turns out. We always notify the colored ministers when anything is lost."

The advice was followed, and the following Sunday the English woman attended services in one of the colored churches. She heard the notification of her loss read from the pulpit by the gray-haired minister, and also his exhortation to his flock to follow his teachings and leave white folks' things alone, and if they found anything on the street to give it up immediately. The exhortation was earnest and emphatic, and calculated to arouse the most dormant listener to a sense of his or her duty in the matter. Similar notices, it afterward transpired, were given in the two other churches, and the following day the boa reached its owner.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

Sticks and Hats.

Parisian society is in a state of ferment over the question whether gentlemen should, when paying visits, carry their sticks, hats and gloves into the drawing-room, says the London Express.

This storm in a tea cup has arisen round the revival of "Les Effrontes" at the Comedie Francaise, in which the chief character does these things, which some consider "taboo."

People argue over the matter with surprising gravity and warmth. We are told that the carrying of canes comes down to us from the old nobility, and is still to some extent a kind of outward and visible sign of wealth or liberal education. The tradesman and artisan only carries a stick when he is holiday-making.

Now, it is said, as our lady friends are well assured of our social position, we have no reason to assert our gentility by sporting our walking-sticks in their drawing-rooms.

As regards the hat, of yore the king always wore his, merely doffing it to ladies. Grandees aped the monarch at a distance by tucking theirs under their arms. Therefore, if we carry our hats into the presence of ladies, it is a kind of sign of deference. Likewise, we carry our gloves as evidence that we walked through the streets with hands covered, and, therefore, can respectfully press the extended fingers of the hostess. All of which is extremely instructive.—[Pittsburgh Press.

CURES VARICOCELE IN 5 DAYS.

We treat every form of weakness, whether existing from birth, contracted disorder, overwork, sickness, nervousness, unnatural losses, impotency, nightly emissions, lack of development, kidney and bladder troubles, failing manhood, lost power, blighted ambition, unfitness to marry, etc. These conditions are brought on by self-abuse or excesses and indiscretion. Contracted disorders, such as Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis, Blood Poison, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, Kidney and Bladder troubles promptly and permanently cured. New methods. Reasonable terms. Consultation free.

Why Old Chronic Diseases Are Not Cured Under the Treatment Usually Employed.

In the more chronic cases of weakness, as we find spots, patches and ulcers appear on the surface, due to neglected and badly cured conditions, which have developed into and are the sources of continual pain and irritation.

The first essential in the successful treatment of these cases is to locate the trouble, determine its nature and to remove the cause by superficial ulceration and thorough purification of the blood, which is accomplished in a few weeks' time, producing clear skin, bright eyes, perfect health and vigor of the organs. By the direct system of home treatment we are enabled to cure these conditions in a few weeks' time.

We especially invite cases that have failed to other methods of treatment, and have arranged to suit convenience of patients.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD IN PASADENA.

PENNETTE ADDRESSES A LARGE CONGREGATION.

Patriotic Sermons in Other Churches—Mayor Calls Mass Meeting to Arrange for Day of Mourning and Prayer.

PASADENA, Office of The Times, 37 South Raymond Avenue, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] Memorial services in honor of the late President McKinley were held in all the leading churches of Pasadena. The largest assemblage was at the Presbyterian Church, where Robert J. Burdette, assisted by Rev. F. Crawford and Rev. I. T. Mahon, officiated, the last-named of whom offering prayer for the relatives and friends of the dead man and for the nation. An elaborate musical programme was rendered, under the direction of W. F. Mason, the Grand Army Members of the W.R.C. and Knights of Pythias marched in a body. The church was filled to overflowing.

BURDETTE'S SERMON.

Mr. Burdette took for his text Jeremiah 22: 10, "For death is come up into our windows, and is entered into our palaces." He said:

"Under the cold and starlight, soft and solemn Mt. Olivet; the low murmur of the Kedron in the shadows at the foot of the hill; the broken accents of prayer breaking from an agonized and terrible little circle of friends waiting for the Master; the unseen presence of the legions of angels hovering; the glory battalions above the head of the Savior: Comes at the head of the band, in the officers of the law, Judas, in the mob, one of the twelve. Judas bends over the hand of his master, crying: 'Hail, Master!' and kisses the hand as he holds it, and with that treacherous kiss drives the dagger into the heart that broke the heart of the world of men!

"Nineteen years twice told time have passed since that scene of brutal treachery, and still the heart of the world cries, 'How could the human race be guilty of such baseness?'

"Memory flashes a picture on the canvas. The Chief Magistrate of the nation stands in the heart of the capital of his people; around him the genius that is a progressive, majestic type of law and its protection and development; a picture of progressive savagery to civilization; from civilization to culture; from biting poverty to accumulated wealth; from daily peril to hourly safety. Around the President a circle of faces lighted with love; kindled with affection; men coupling his name with the nation; old soldiers wearing the uniform of the Grand Army, and a thousand patriotic memories; face of their right soldier; women pressing forward to grasp of his hand; little children to him to lisp their love with the sweet shyness always winning a smile from face that looked down upon him a ring of true hearts black; around him a circle of hearts, every one of which given every drop of blood to save his head from the throbbing casemate of [illegible] a creature in guise of [illegible] was under the protection of this flag; the President went out to him [illegible] and genuine cordiality [illegible] be greeted the salute of [illegible] rich and poor—white [illegible] always more [illegible] hand that had [illegible] or plane, plow or [illegible] white hand that tolled [illegible] many-millioned luxury of [illegible]—this son of an iron [illegible] private soldier of the [illegible] third. The two hands [illegible] clasp of treachery, the hand of manhood and [illegible] the slimy folds of a serpent, hand of murder is [illegible] no sense of horror in [illegible] around? No nameless [illegible] No shuddering dread [illegible], shadowing the sunshine [illegible] hour? One—two—the [illegible] and sparchy has done [illegible] work! Since the black [illegible] made his name so accursed [illegible] never since then has the [illegible] Christian, atheist, pagan [illegible] it on the head of a child—[illegible] not been a crime so black—[illegible] so cowardly! Over the only [illegible] that fences the President [illegible] the love of loyal hearts [illegible] up into our windows [illegible] our palaces.'

"Then came, the great sacrilege, the throttling grasp of [illegible] the life of a young [illegible] the throes of life—[illegible] beneath the black curse [illegible] Abraham Lincoln. A [illegible] the force lust of office-[illegible] A. Garfield. And to [illegible] the nation, [illegible] of the whole hideous curse of anarchy—McKinley!

"Must he be a sin-offering, and [illegible] be a sacrifice of peace-[illegible] and the law, 'he shall [illegible] blemish—he shall offer [illegible] before the [illegible] of the flock, always.

"Oh, we forget these [illegible]. 'Oh,' we said, [illegible] bitterness of the [illegible] was slain. 'Never [illegible] shadow of human slavery [illegible] race oppression rest [illegible].' And yet today, [illegible] by frauds at the [illegible] neither denied nor apologized [illegible] legislation oppressive, [illegible] to the principles of [illegible] is saying to the [illegible] of his color, 'You [illegible] but you shall not [illegible] wrong, wrong, wickedly [illegible] disrespect for law; [illegible] for justice; it assumes [illegible] right. When Garfield [illegible] by a disappointed [illegible]—the awful price for the [illegible]—we said that never again [illegible] our President to be [illegible] of a patronage bureau [illegible] of offices. And yet, [illegible] Presidential election, how [illegible] to shown in the scramble [illegible] And now, standing again [illegible] side of our illustrious dead—[illegible] President murdered by a sin [illegible]—we declare that this free [illegible] we have tolerated, permitted, [illegible] which so many thousands of [illegible] and good men have given their [illegible]—a land not be an asylum for [illegible] that prey upon the innocent [illegible] the good; it shall [illegible] a refuge for the enemies of the [illegible].

"The hosts of villains, who have [illegible] for naught, but [illegible] for blood—the devil-[illegible] of destruction; those cowards of cowards, who cry 'Down with the law!' and then, caught in the meshes of the law by their villainy, come into court attended by a retinue of counsel, shrieking for the protection of the law, clamoring for all the rights of legal procedure! Out upon such mockery of justice! Down with such a travesty of the spirit of the law! Is it right, is it justice, is it mercy to our children, that we give to these wild beasts the asylum of the republic—that we nourish a brood of vipers amid the cradles of our children? 'Remember what Amalek did unto thee by the way, when ye were come forth out of Egypt,' God said to his people long years ago, 'how that he met thee by the way, and smote all that were faint behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary, and he feared not God. Therefore, it shall be, when the Lord, thy God, hath given thee rest from all thine enemies round about, in the land which the Lord, thy God, giveth thee, that thou shalt blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven—thou shalt not forget it!' And because a king of God's people did forget to do this, because he slew of Amalek only all save one, and he a king—God tore his throne and kingdom away from him, and blotted out his name and house in blood!

"Oh, men and women of America, if we, sitting at our ease in this rich and goodly land, at peace with all the world—if we in our own pleasures and wealth, money-getting, and prosperous happiness—if, because it is too much trouble to destroy evil, and suppress crime and rebuke vice—if we forget to utterly destroy these enemies of God and man—if we neglect this duty or forget it, God will make of the sin we tolerate, a whip of scorpions for our scourging—a rod of iron to break us. Remember that!

"Two duties we have today—a duty to the dead—a higher duty to the living. With reverence and tenderness, with loyalty and love, we, his comrades of the Grand Army; you, his fellow-citizens, bow our heads and our hearts to the one. God nerve and strengthen our hearts and brains and arms to do the other.

"On the day the murderer struck the President down, as the sufferer lay on the operating table, just as he passed under the influences of the anesthetics, he murmured: 'Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done.' Let our hearts echo the prayer. Amen and amen! 'Thy kingdom come!' Bring forth judgment unto truth. Fail not nor be discouraged till thou hast set judgment in the earth. Lord God of our fathers, are not thou God in heaven? Rule thou over all the kingdoms of the earth; in majesty and power establish thy kingdom. Whet thou thy glittering sword, and let thy hand take hold on judgment; render vengeance to the enemies of thy righteousness; make thine arrows drunk with the blood of them that hate thee! Thy kingdom come.'

"'Thy Will Be Done!' So sang, in the bygone days of other national sorrows, the dead President's Secretary of State, John T. Hay:

"THY WILL BE DONE."

"Not in dumb resignation
We lift our hands on high;
Not like the nerveless fatalist,
Content to trust and die;
Our faith springs like the eagle
Who soars to meet the sun,
And cries, exulting unto thee,
O Lord, thy will be done.

"When brutal feet are trampling
Upon the common weal,
Thou dost not bid us bend and writhe
Beneath the iron heel;
In thy name we assert the right
By sword, or tongue, or pen—
Even the headsman's ax may flash
Thy message unto men.

"Thy will! It bids the weak be strong!
It bids the strong be just!
No lip to fawn, no hand to beg,
No brow to seek the dust.
Wherever man oppresses man
Beneath thy liberal sun,
O Lord, be there thine arm made bare—
Thy righteous will be done!"

REV. HUSTON'S WORDS.

At the First Methodist Church, in G. A. R. Hall the pastor, Rev. J. M. Huston preached upon: "The Blessings of National Affliction," saying in part:

"Consider for a moment the last speech that this illustrious man made, it reached out in its influences to the whole civilized world. The London papers quoted it extensively. The Standard said: 'It will excite through Europe as keen interest as it will arouse in the western continent. It is the utterance of a man who feels that he is at the head of a great nation, with vast ambitions, and a newborn consciousness of strength.

"Consider further this man whose mind has devised laws that will affect the destiny of a mighty nation, whose beneficent hand has been reached out to protect the afflicted inhabitants on the islands of two oceans, the man who has led his nation to the front rank among the great powers of the world, in such a contemplation the ordinary man needs the cheer of God's word to lift him up out of his full sense of insignificance. He needs to consider that God estimates men by their loyalty to him in filling the positions for which he has created them. This is the good cheer of God's word placed over against this other thought in the word. 'For thou hast made him'—not the great man, but any man who trusts in God—'a little lower than the angels, and has crowned him with glory and honor.'

"Affliction gives us ability to suffer with and help others who are tried, as has been well said 'He who would be a savior must have been at some time, and somewhere placed on a cross.' David in his affliction, spoke words that have cooled the fevered brow of many generations. Paul had a thorn in the flesh and learned the triumphsmant words of the text. Jesus Christ was made a perfect savior through suffering. Jesus Christ said: 'And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.'

"The death of William McKinley may be made a special blessing by emphasizing certain facts that need to be taught the American people. This nation has need to learn the sacredness of the Christian Sabbath. There are many influences that tend to destroy this. William McKinley from a child was found in the house of God on the Lord's day. This nation has need of respect for the Christian ministry. While we honor the ambassadors of earthly kings, shall we not honor the ambassador of the King of Heaven. William McKinley did not seek out some great preacher that he might show respect to the human side, but where he happened to be he went to church and honored God, however humble the messenger might be."

REV. CONNOR'S REMARKS.

At the Universalist Church Rev. Ralph E. Conner chose as his theme "What Kind of a World is This to Permit Such a Personal Sin and National Tragedy?" His texts were Genesis 1, 31, "And God saw everything that He had made, and behold, it was good;" and John xvii, 15, "I pray not thou shouldst take them from the world, but thou shouldst keep them from the evil." He said in part:

"Our beloved President has been assassinated. It seems incredible that he who honored our State with his presence last spring and who took such a hearty interest in our festivities; he who was so good and gracious in his private character and public conduct, should be the victim of a deadly assassin. It seems cruel, too. Never, since Caesar was struck down in the Roman Senate, has such a base ingratitude been expressed, that would spurn the extended hand of friendship, kill one of the kindliest men of the land, whose only reply was: 'How could you, sir! God forgive him! Let no one harm him.'

"It seems so unreasonable. Anarchists sometimes slay arbitrary rulers, but William McKinley was not arbitrary, and he was not a ruler. The people are sovereign in this country. The bullet which pierced the side of our President pierced the heart of the American people!

"We condemn the foul assassin and rightly so, but may he not be the harvest of the seed whose sowing we have allowed? Every inflammatory word against our government, every cartoon and caricature of our President, every baseless assertion of sensational journalism fans the flame of anarchy.

"The reckless statements of so-called social reformers and the intemperate utterances of professed temperance people who dare to call the President of the United States a traitor and a hypocrite are hatchers of lawlessness. It is high time to break the egg and smash the incubator of anarchy."

REV. M'CORMACK'S THEME.

At All Saints' Episcopal Church this morning the pastor, Rev. William MacCormack, paid high tribute to the memory of the President. "He was ever in the hearts of the people," he said. "There is one virtue which he possessed to a stronger degree than any other man. That was faithfulness. He was faithful as Chief Magistrate to the demands of the nation; as a husband, nothing could be more touching than his faithfulness to his invalid wife, and he was faithful as a Christian and as a man. No better word than 'faithfulness' could be written upon his epitaph. At 2:15 o'clock Saturday morning, when he breathed his last, God must have said of his life, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.'"

This evening Rev. MacCormack dealt particularly with the assassination of the President. He spoke of the Lord's punishment of the people in David's time. David asked God to punish him, not the people who were blameless, but in the modern case, God knows best. The President suffered for the real or imagined wrongs which are traceable to popular conditions.

PRAYS FOR DEAD PRESIDENT.

POMONA, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] The little city of churches has today been sincerely and deeply reverent in the shadow of the national bereavement. Flags are half-masted and numerous black-draped pictures of President McKinley are prominent. The churches were crowded this morning with hundreds of worshipers, mourning for the late President. Most of the pulpits were draped with the American flag, intertwined with crape, and the services were closed with the singing of that beautiful hymn which the martyred President chanted in his last moments of consciousness, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The subject of the strong, inspiring discourse, given at the Methodist Church by Rev. Dr. George W. White, was, "The Mighty Dead." Rev. W. C. Clatworthy, of the Baptist Church chose for his subject, "A Nation's Woe." At the Pilgrim Congregational Church Rev. Lucien H. Frary, D.D., preached a powerful and uplifting sermon upon "Our Nation Bereaved, but Not Forsaken."

LONG BEACH HAS NO USE FOR ANARCHISTS.

RED FLAG FIGURATIVELY TORN AND TRAMPLED UPON.

Citizens' Mass Meeting Worked Up to White Heat of Patriotic Fervor—Plea for Christian Socialism Cried Down. Season's Slow Wane.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Correspondent.] The red flag of anarchy was reddened pale and innocuous under a withering light of patriotic fervor at the mass meeting held in the City Hall Saturday evening. That despicable rag was cursed, trampled upon and laid threadbare under a mass of loyal utterances, and the would-be destroyers of this twentieth-century civilization were figuratively annihilated.

The hall was filled almost to overflowing. Prof. R. H. Tripp presided, and J. M. Miller acted as secretary. Speeches were made by many of those present, and the resolutions which were passed by the Southern California Veteran Encampment Association, at its recent encampment at Coronado, were adopted. A committee composed of Dr. L. A. Perce, J. M. Miller and G. G. Shaw was appointed to draft other resolutions, which were presented and also adopted.

Rev. Charles Pease, pastor of the Long Beach Congregational Church, urged moderation toward Christian Socialists, but the temper of the gathering was so warm that his plea received little or no support. Yellow journalism was severly scored. The meeting was adjourned subject to the call of the chair, and of the Resolutions Committee.

WINE SAUCE PERMITTED.

It is officially announced that the use of wine for flavoring pudding sauces and "sich" will be permitted in Long Beach, in spite of the prohibition ordinance. City Marshal Baker informs The Times that he never told Landlord Dunham or any other hotel man, that wine sauce would be prohibited. The idea strikes the Marshal as "ridiculous." Evidently somebody else thought so, and has been having fun with the Marshal. A rule he ought to enforce is that wine sauce shall be the real stuff, and not a sloppy imitation made for the delusion of the wayfaring public.

SEASON'S SLOW WANE.

The wane of the most prosperous season in the history of this seaside town is much more gradual than was anticipated. Without the Southern California Veterans' Encampment, which for the three previous successive years has prolonged the stay of the summer colony, the warm-weather visitors are lingering much more than it was thought they would.

While the streets today are not thronged as on the Sundays in August, the thoroughfares are far from deserted. There is a considerable crowd on the wharf and pavilion, and many are enjoying a dip in the surf.

William Green of Redlands, F. G. Dessery, M. D. Tomlinson, Mr. and Mrs. M. I. Hubbell of Los Angeles are at the Park View.

Peter C. Peters and son of Colton, P. M. Coburn of Riverside, J. E. Vaugh of Santa Ana, James Westfield of Los Angeles and Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Johnson of Pomona are at the Iowa Villa.

The gasoline launch O.K. took a party to Portuguese Bend Saturday, where a day's outing among the rocks was enjoyed. The party included Mrs. J. W. Thurber, Mrs. A. M. Perkins, Lenora Robinson, Myrtle Hall, Lottie Halliford, Anna Willoughby, Grace Asher, Buelah Thurber, Amy A. Young, Mrs. J. W. Russell, Mrs. M. Beggein, Miss Hattie Beach, Allie Officer, Virgil Vail, Orine Russell, O. C. Willoughby, Leo and Carl Willoughby, Carl Asher, Laurence Tiffany, Glace and James Thurber, M. A. Holt, I. R. Halliford, H. B. Beach and J. W. Russell.

BRIGHTON BEACH.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

BRIGHTON BEACH (Terminal Island) Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Correspondent.] Fred Hines, George W. Luce and Richard Beebe are numbered among the season's most enthusiastic rod-an-reel men. They went out to sea Saturday, but the fish, which usually show appreciation of the latest things in tackle, refused to take the party's bait. Later in the day from the Brighton Beach wharf the same anglers got a good string of the finny fellows.

On account of the death of the President the usual weekly hop was not held at the Brighton Beach Hotel Saturday evening.

Mrs. Carrie R. Craig of Los Angeles was a guest of William Watson Lovett and sons at the Brighton Beach Hotel Saturday.

William Watson Lovett, William Watson Lovett, Jr., and Craig Lovett of Los Angeles, went on a fishing trip Saturday and returned with a big string of finny specimens. The Lovetts have quarters at the Brighton Beach Hotel.

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Seymour, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Perez of Los Angeles; Hiram W. Wadsworth and Katherine and Mary Wadsworth of Pasadena; Ben F. Seawald of St. Louis, Tossie Maxwell, L. A. Denker, L. A. White, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse F. Waterman and G. E. Dunham of Los Angeles are at the Brighton Beach Hotel.

SANTA MONICA.

PRAYER AND MOURNING.

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] In sympathy with the national feeling of sorrow, Santa Monica observed this as a day of mourning and prayer. Seldom before on a Sunday has the beach been so quiet. All places of amusement were closed, and those who came for a day's outing seemed to be in no mood for sports or hilarity.

Special services were held in all the churches, and the ministers, without exception, made different phases of the recent national disaster the topics of their sermons. Prayers were offered for the widow of the late President, and for the new Chief Magistrate.

The national colors at half-mast, and a general display of black crepe betokened the people's homage to a great sorrow, and on many private houses these emblems were arranged artistically, but without any attempt at display.

SANTA MONICA BREVITIES.

The golf tournament and tea which were to have been held at the Country Club on Saturday, but were postponed, will probably take place on Wednesday afternoon, and the tennis games on Saturday. An official announcement, however, will be made later on.

Lieut. M. G. Burmeister, who has been in South Africa with the British army, and later in England, is on his way to New Orleans to buy horses and mules for the British government, and will be in Santa Monica some time in October.

Mrs. Charles Sysmie and Mrs. Charles Simmonds were the guests of Percy South Saturday, at his Covina ranch.

Messrs. Will and Tom Rife of Los Angeles have been guests at the Holmer cottage on Nevada avenue for a few days.

Kenneth Carter, who has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Peyton Carter on Third street, has departed for Catalina.

Miss Alice Brooks entertained a few friends at tea at her home on Third street last Friday.

Mrs. M. G. Burmeister entertained Miss Lailah Holmes and Will and Tom Rife at supper Saturday night.

SAN DIEGO CANNON BOOM SAD SALUTE.

MANIFESTATIONS OF SORROW AT THE SOUTHERN BAY CITY.

Buildings Bedecked in Somber Garb and Preparations Made for Public Memorial Services the Day of Funeral—San Diego Brevities.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] In this city manifestations of sorrow at the death of the President are evident everywhere. All flags are displayed at half-mast and in the windows of the stores and offices there is displayed the picture of the martyred Chief appropriately draped.

The Weather Bureau office was closed yesterday and will be closed on the day of the funeral. The floor on which this office and the costumhouse is located is draped in somber black, and measures will be taken by the Council tomorrow night in response to a special message to be submitted by Mayor Frary to have the City Hall below, draped from top to bottom.

There is a general movement on foot to have all places of business close on Thursday, and to hold public memorial exercises some time during the day. The public schools will be closed, and the county superintendent has notified all the schools in the back country that can be reached to close on that day, and where it is possibel hold appropriate exercises.

At the army post today a gun has been fired every half hour since sunrise and the salute will continue according to the regulations until the sun goes down. On the day of the funeral a salute of seventeen guns will be fired in the mornig and twenty-one at night.

SAN DIEGO BREVITIES.

At the meting of the library trustees to be held this week that body will advertise for proposals for the furniture to be used in the new Carnegie library building which is fast nearing completion.

A special car arived by the Southern California train this noon with thirty Cuban children for the Raja Yoga school at Piu Point Loma.

CORONADO BEACH.

TEA PARTY AND CONCERT.

HOTEL DEL CORONADO, Sept. 15.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] A pleasant outing was given yesterday at the Japanese tea garden by Alexis Bjornson in honor of a number of his friends. The tea girl, Saito Kiku, who has but recently arrived, served tea for the first time in the little tea house by the lake. After inspecting the grounds the guests donned dainty kimonas and were photographed on the lawn in groups, as well as riding in the jinrikishas. Among those invited were Mr. and Mrs. Clayton, Miss Parker, Mrs. Manning, Mrs. Hammett, Master Buell Hammett, Emeline Clayton, Mrs. Laughlin, Mrs. Elizabeth Craib, Mrs. Kneedler, Mrs. Newlin and Miss Healy.

The last concert of the season, given last evening, was a brilliant success, the works of the famous composer, Moses-Tobani, being taken up for the occasion. The three soloists, F. G. Paulisch, F. P. Harlow and Dr. A. F. Wayne, did the best work they have done this season, each on his particular instrument, exciting long and loud applause from the audience. Mr. Paulisch is an artistic cornetist, and his rendition last evening of the Emerson polka, followed by a difficult arrangement of the old English song, "Sally in Our Alley," was wonderfully executed, the sustained tone ending in a crescendo being accomplished with the greatest ease.

Mr. Harlow played a composition of his own, and distinguished himself as a composer, but as a trombonist. "The Wanderer" is the title of the musician's late composition, and his excellent execution on the most difficult of brass instruments pleased the audience to such a degree that insistent applause compelled the young gentleman to play "Romance" (Bennett.)

Dr. A. F. Wayne, the third and last soloist, did most creditable work on clarinet. He ran through the various cadenzas and chromatics with an ease only accomplished after many years' assiduous practice, and his close attention to his work has brought him to a point of perfection.

Woman Becomes Insane.

Los Angeles Theater.

This morning the sale of seats opens at the Los Angeles Theater for the coming engagement of Annie Russell in the romantic comedy, "A Royal Family," which comes to the theater next Thursday evening. This is one of New York's last season's successes, where it ran for over two hundred nights to crowded houses.

Fire Singes Clothing.

Fire in the cottage of Dr. H. C. Haughawout at No. 115 South Flower street about 6 o'clock yesterday morning caused a nominal loss. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It started in a clothes closet, but was extinguished before it had done further damage than to singe several articles of wearing apparel. Dr. and Mrs. Haughawout were absent.

Early Morning Assault.

A man giving the name of John Bueso was treated at the Receiving Hospital early yesterday morning for an injury to one of his eyes, and in the opinion of Police Surgeon Pierce he may lose the sight. Bueso said that just as he was leaving a lunch counter on East First street a man unknown to him struck him a blow in the face with a weapon, the nature of which he does not know.

Church's Action.

The official board and members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church yesterday morning adopted a resolution deploring the death of President McKinley, who was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and extending heartfelt sympathy to his stricken widow, praying that she be strengthened in the hour of trial. A copy of the resolution will be forwarded to Mrs. McKinley.

Orphans Run Away.

Fifteen children, between the ages of 6 and 10 years, yesterday afternoon ran away from the Los Angeles Orphans' Home at No. 809 Yale street. The matter was reported to the police, but up to a late hour last night the youngsters had not been located. It is presumed they went to the homes of their respective relatives. Ten boys, wearing blue overalls, and barefooted, and five girls attired in calico dresses made up the party of escapes.

Two Houses Robbed.

The home of Joseph Belk, No. 307 South Figueroa street, was entered by a thief yesterday, and the intruder made away with a considerable quantity of fruit and melons. The thief gained an entrance to the house by cutting the wire screening from a rear outside door. Mrs. J. W. Coleman of No. 145 San Pedro street reported to the police yesterday that a thief who visited her home about three weeks ago, stole several dresses and other articles of clothing.

The Los Angeles Sericulture Club will meet in room one of the Chamber of Commerce today at 2 o'clock. About fifty people in this city are actively engaged in experimental work with silk-worm raising. Today's meeting is the first since the summer's vacation, and items of special interest to the industry will be presented, including communications from Secretary Rust of the Bureau of Agriculture at Washington, who is taking a keen interest in the work in Southern California.

Arrest Ends a Fight.

A quarrel between three Mexicans yesterday evening resulted in the arrest of one on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and the sending of another to the Receiving Hospital to be treated for a severe scalp wound. Benito Corralejos and his brother engaged in a quarrel with Romulo Alonzo on Buena Vista street. The fight ended when Alonzo struck Benito on the head with a long iron bar. Alonzo is a prisoner at the City Jail, and Benito was mended in the hospital with four stitches.

At the Chutes.

One of the largest crowds of the season was present at Chutes Park yesterday to enjoy the good things placed before them by Manager Eliet and his corps of entertainers. Edward T. Adams presented a new olio of descriptive songs, including the new eastern craze, "Bump a Little," selections from "The Moth and the Flame" and "A White Man Working for Me." Jennie Lind, the daring lady cyclist, again displayed her nerve in coasting the chutes and the Bohemian glass blowers were an addition to the midway. The climax of the programme was the balloon ascension and parachute jump by Prof. Hamilton. Tonight Fred Montgomery will give his "illustrated songs."

Five hundred and eight horses and ponies are used, one way and another, and the menagerie annex contains thirty elephants and a giraffe, the only one known to be in captivity. This beast is valued at $20,000, and, as may well be imagined, is watched and waited upon with tenderest care. Sixty-five cars are required to carry the organization from place to place. The expenses of the show amount to $7000 a day.

FATAL HEMORRHAGE.

William D. Jaycox Bleeds to Death as the Result of a Fit of Coughing.

Had Served His Country.

William D. Jaycox, a veteran of the Civil War, 66 years old, died at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon from hemorrhage, in the lodging-house of which he was the proprietor at No. 939 East First street. The remains were removed to the undertaking rooms of Garrett & Co. on North Main street, where today an investigation will be made by the Coroner.

Just after 3 o'clock in the afternoon a woman who occupied the room adjoining that used by Jaycox, heard a commotion in his room. Following a siege of coughing, she heard a loud noise, as of some heavy body falling.

A male roomer of the house was called by the woman and he broke open the door. Jaycox lay on the floor and a pool of blood was around his head.

The Police Station was at once notified that a man had shot himself and the patrol wagon was dispatched at mad speed to the lodging-house. In the mean time Patrolman Baker had been summoned and, on entering the room, found Mr. Jaycox dead.

The Coroner was notified, and on his instructions, the dead body was taken to the rooms of Garrett & Co.

Jaycox was a native of Ohio and it was in that State that he enlisted in the Federal army at the outbreak of the Civil War. For several years he has been an inmate of the Soldiers' Home. Recently he came to Los Angeles and, with a smal amount of money he had accumulated, rented the building where he carried on a lodging-house. J. E. Vawter, an intimate friend of the deceased, transacted his business. Vawter had left the house only about ten minutes before Jaycox died.

It is with pleasure that I state that I have had several teeth filled by Dr. Schiffman, and that he removed the nerve and filled the root of one of my teeth and put on a porcelain crown which cannot be distinguished from a natural tooth, all of which was done without pain.
JUDSON E. RUSH,

I have had porcelain crown work and some filling done, and also had ten teeth and roots extracted by Dr. Schiffman, and take great pleasure in recommending his method to anyone wishing dental work done without pain.

I have had teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without pain and recommend him to my friends. M. B. APPLE,
Bailiff Police Court, City.

To Dr. Schiffman—Dear Sir: It gives me pleasure to state that you extracted fourteen teeth for me without the slightest pain, that the gums healed quickly, that the set of flexible plate teeth you fitted me with gave perfect satisfaction at first, and after twenty-two months are seemingly just as good as new.
Yours truly, J. [illegible]
